4 INJURED IN TROLLEY CAR WRECK

NORTH ANDOVER, Oct. 25.—The Lawrence trolley that passed through here at 10:15 a. m. on its way from Salem, to-day split the switch at Wilsons Corner, left the rails, came to a sudden stop and heaped twenty passengers at one end of the car.

Four were injured. Others were badly shaken up. The four, one of whom was the conductor, were rushed to the Lawrence Hospital in automobiles. Wilson's corner is just three miles from Lawrence.

The injured people are:

ALEXANDER CHAMPION of Salem, conductor of the car, leg broken.

JOSIAH DODGE, Beverly, bruises about the head and body.

THOMAS BURKE, Rotterdam Junction, New York, bruised.

T. F. NORTON, Salem, bruised.

The car was in charge of Motorman William Irish and the injured conductor, Champion. It was going at a high rate of speed when it struck the switch. The switch is a bad one because it is at this point that the Haverhill and Andover trolley line crosses this line, the Salem and Lawrence.

The front truck of the heavy car took the switch all right, but the second did not and turned in the direction of Haverhill. The big car leaped for some rods, but came to a quick stop as the wheels buried themselves in the soft earth on the side of the track.

There were twenty passengers in the car. As the car left the rails many jumped to their feet. Those and the others were all headed in the front end of the car when it struck.

500 DEAD BY STORM IN ITALY

NAPLES, Oct. 25.—In the fear that more than 500 may be dead in the cloudburst and tidal wave, Government officials are doing everything in their power to get aid to the storm-swept island of Ischia to-day and also to obtain the real news of the situation from there. It is believed that the loss of life has been heavy, and that a number of Americans may be included among the victims, as the island was a resort of tourists. Communication was practically cut off to-day, the only information that has reached here being that brought by ships that passed near the island.

A cruiser was ordered in readiness to-day to take King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helen to Ischia.

Twelve Dead at Palermo.

Twelve bodies were recovered at Palermo from the ruins of buildings. Many owners were killed. Ten persons were badly wounded and were found pinned beneath wreckage.

Relief trains were rushed to-day to Casamicciola, a town of 4,000 inhabitants. The first report received here said that that town had been destroyed, but it is now known that the disaster is not so complete there as had been feared. The Mayor sent word that there was a heavy loss of life.

The whole Italian coast was ravaged to the south of Rome. Heavy damage and loss of life was reported from Cetara in the Gulf of Salerno. Even in this city the effects of the storm were apparent to-day.

Vesuvius in Eruption.

Mount Vesuvius is in action, threatening another outburst. The mud streams which buried alive several families yesterday are still flowing from the volcano.

Three battleships and four cruisers arrived in the Bay of Naples to-day for relief work. Two vessels were immediately sent to Ischia, sixteen miles southwest of this city. The vessels carried soldiers to maintain order.

At Resina, which is built upon the ruins of Herculaneum, many were injured. Seldom was all through the night rescuing the injured from the wrecks of buildings.

Ten bodies had been recovered to-day at Torre Greco, at the foot of Mount Vesuvius. A street was destroyed by the streams of mud and lava which flowed from the crater. Four of five families perished, others are missing.

DOUBLE CHIN SAVED EFFORT TO END LIFE

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 25.—Fred J. Bailey, a former classmate of Theodore Roosevelt at Harvard, who is indicted by the Polk County Grand Jury, charged with larceny by embezzlement, attempted to commit suicide in the county jail here by cutting his throat. A fat double chin prevented the razor from severing the jugular vein. He secured the razor on the pretext that he wished to shave off his Van Dyke beard.

CENSUS FIGURES.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The Census Bureau to-day made public the following population returns:

Kentucky—Jefferson County, 262,020; last census, 232,549.

New York—Cornwall Township, 5,630; last census, 4,278; Cornwall Village, 2,958; last census, 1,506.

WHAT THE ENGLISH INDICTMENT AGAINST MISS LENEVE SAYS

The indictment against Ethel LeNeve read in court was as follows:

"The prisoner, knowing that Dr. H. H. Crippen had murdered his wife, did afterward feloniously receive, comfort, harbor, assist and maintain him."

NEW TRANSIT PLAN OFFERED

The Boylston Street Merchants Association are advocating a four track subway beneath Boylston street as a solution for the rapid transit problem. Their proposed plan is offered as being superior to the Riverbank Subway in that it takes care of future development.

The general plan of the new route is for a subway under Boylston street for a little more than a third of a mile. A station is to be located in Park square, and another perhaps, between Park and Boylston streets near West. It is planned to have a continuous platform in the new subway so that additional stations may be added where needed without interruption of traffic.

This plan is believed by its supporters to be the solution of the transit problem as it will relieve the congestion in the down-town district and provide for adequate connection with South station and the Washington street tunnel.

RESCUE FOUR MEN ADRIFT IN OCEAN

GLOUCESTER, Oct. 25.—Captain Robert Wixon of the fishing schooner Senator Salisbury, which arrived here from the banks to-day, reported that members of his crew rescued the four members of the fishing schooner Margaret Leonard from an open boat and landed them at Shelburne, N. S. The Leonard was in ballast, sailing from Rockport to Westport, N. S., last Thursday, when she foundered in a gale. The vessel was in command of Captain Arthur Porter and was owned in Westport.

BANQUET TO DRAPER SATURDAY EVENING

The banquet tendered by the business men of Boston to Governor Draper will be held at the Hotel Somerset on Saturday evening next. The reception will be at 6:30 o'clock and the dinner at 7 o'clock. The banquet committee consists of James Richard Carter, Harry W. Kimball, William M. Flanders, J. M. W. Hall, F. H. Warren, James F. Tolman and Frank S. Chick. Tickets can be obtained from them or from D. A. Whiting, rooms 117 and 118, No. 77 Summer street.

25,000 BARRELS OF APPLES ON LINER

The Cunard liner Ivernia, which starts to-day for Liverpool, carries 25,000 barrels of apples grown in three counties in Maine. It required 125 freight cars to get this particular consignment to the East Boston dock. This is the largest apple shipment ever sent out of Boston since November 22, 1902, when the same line carried away 39,611 barrels. It is worth a fortune.

SALOON SALE CLOSED IN ALL TENNESSEE

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 24.—Saloons all over the State are being closed to-day under the authority of a restraining order issued against them by U. S. Judge Sanford. Six hundred saloons closed in Chattanooga this morning and 200 more will be closed in Nashville to-day. The injunction was sought by the Law and Order League and according to the leaders will be made permanent at the hearing of the case in the United States Court Thursday.

GENERAL DARLING'S FATHER DIED TO-DAY

Joseph K. Darling, father of Brig.-Gen. Charles K. Darling, clerk of the United States Circuit Court of this city, died to-day in Chelsea, Vt., at the age of seventy-seven. Mr. Darling was formerly a member of the Vermont Legislature and Senate. He served in the Civil War with the Vermont brigade. He held now and then regarded as the leading attorney in Orange County, Vt.

WIGHTMAN IS ELIMINATED IN SUPPLE SUIT

The attorneys for James J. Supple rested their case shortly before noon to-day in the suit against William H. Wightman and his wife, charging them with alienating the affections of Supple's wife. After a conference between lawyers, Judge Bell ordered the jury to bring in a verdict of "no evidence" against Mr. Wightman. The case against Mrs. Wightman then proceeded.

Two letters written by Lizzie Supple to which she told of her husband's beating her with doubled fists" were read to-day when the twenty-five-year-old wife resumed the witness stand for cross-examination. Mrs. Elsie Supple formerly worked as a nurse girl for the Wightmans at their home, No. 1888 Beacon street, Brookline. James J. Supple, the husband, declares that they got his wife to leave him, that they secreted her from him, and finally aided her to go back to her home in England. The case is being tried before a jury. The question to be decided is how much the husband is entitled to for being deprived of his wife's society.

The Supples have a three-months-old baby, born shortly after their reconciliation. Mrs. Supple has the baby with her when she comes to court. When she is not testifying she wheels it up and down the corridor outside the courtroom.

Tells of Kicking.

The young couple have become reconciled and the wife is the principal witness for her husband in his suit. The first of the two letters put in by the defence and read to-day was written after the reconciliation and just previous to the time when Mrs. Supple left her husband and stayed away from home for two days. It is addressed to her aunt. The letter as read in court follows:

Dear Aunt Nell—I am writing to tell you that I cannot do as I said I would as Jim has been kicking, biting and pounding me with his doubled fists on my back and I can hardly move, and then he has to go over to the Cook's and they would take care of me.

Oh, aunt, that you would come over as I have made up my mind not to live. He told me this morning to get out or he would pull me limb from limb. I am afraid of him as he hit me with a knife. He knocked me out of bed Sunday and told me to go to No. 1888 Beacon street to the Wightmans. He said he didn't like me and that he did not want to work for the likes of me. He says he will get through with me and kill me if I don't answer this letter for he'll know I've been writing to you and he'll kill me if he knows it.

Admits Writing Letters.

Mrs. Supple admitted she wrote this letter and that it was written just before she left home to stay for two days. Attorney Jeremiah Sullivan then asked:

Q.—Was everything pleasant at home before you left your husband to stay over two nights? A.—Not particularly.

Q.—And the unpleasantness just existed as described by you in the letter that I have just read? A.—Yes.

Attorney Sullivan then produced another letter which was addressed to Rita Bernier, girl friend of Mrs. Supple. It was as follows:

"I am very sorry to disappoint you, would have written to you before only Jim was home and he gave me a thing in the side that winded me. He says I can go, but the last one't. I am writing to Bessie to see if my husband can take the baby away from me."

Mrs. Supple admitted that this letter was written two days before the time when she disappeared and later went to England.

8 ESCAPE AS YACHT BLOWS UP

EDGARTOWN, Martha's Vineyard, Oct. 25.—The lives of eight persons, six men and two women, were imperilled when the handsome schooner yacht Senta, owned by John A. Fox of New York city, burned to the water's edge and sank in the harbor here at 2:30 a. m. after an explosion of 250 gallons of gasoline, following an explosion of a small tank of kerosene used for heating purposes. Fox and two women guests rushed to the deck. Captain Wallace Brown and his crew of four men succeeded in getting two boats off the davits. The gasoline exploded when the party was but a few hundred yards away from the burning hulk.

The guests of the owner were G. A. Williams of Noank, Ct., and Miss K. S. Barnes of New York. The party lost all their valuables and practically all their clothing. Fox escaped in his pajamas.

As he tells the story, Fish was awakened by the smell of smoke in the cabin. Investigating, he discovered the main cabin ablaze, probably from a heater fed by kerosene. In a moment the oil tank burst into flames all over the ship. Acting under instructions from Fish, the crew made no attempt to save the yacht, but directed their attention to getting off the boats.

The yacht anchored in the harbor yesterday, on her way to New York. After a few days' stop there, Fish had planned a sail to Florida.

The "Senta" was valued at $25,000, and stores and valuables lost bring the total loss up to $30,000.

DIRECT BOSTON LINE TO AFRICA

Vice-Consul-General George L. Foster of Cape Town has reported to Washington that an arrangement has been concluded between the German-Australian steamship company and Elder, Dempster & Co. for a direct steamship service from South African ports to the United States. Freight, it is reported, will be accepted for this country at South African ports at rates considerably lower than those charged at present.

INCOMING CYMRIC'S CABIN LIST LARGE

Frederick P. Ley, British Consul-General at Boston, announced by his wife, two daughters and a governess, are saloon passengers on the incoming cyracle of the White Star line, due Thursday. The Cymric is bringing a remarkably large cabin list for this time of the year. Isobar Franklin, former court reporter in Lowell, and Mrs. Crane are returning. Admiral Dubois of the United States Navy, retired, is another passenger.

RECORD GAIN AT ANDOVER ACADEMY

ANDOVER, Oct. 25. Phillips Andover Academy has the largest enrollment of students in its history, 570. A year ago at this time of the year there were 486 students. The gain has increased during the year and a still larger enrollment than the present total is looked for this year. There are 190 students from Massachusetts.

COTTON STATISTICS BY CENSUS BUREAU

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The Census Bureau this morning issued a cotton report showing 5,140,960 bales, counting round as half bales, ginned from the growth of 1910 to October 18, compared with 5,530,967 for 1909, 6,296,166 for 1908 and 4,226,758 for 1907. Sea Island bales included this year are 65,105; compared with 88,718 for 1909, 118,720 for 1908 and 97,955 for 1907. Sea Island, 25,324 for 1910, 31,887 for 1909, 52,013 for 1908 and 18,775 for 1907.

COTTON PRICES JUMP.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Prices jumped from 5 to 24 points at the opening on the New York Cotton Exchange to-day, as the result of cotton ginning figures falling short of expectations. In addition, heavy covering there was good demand from some of the big interests. F. H. Hayne bid 14.10 for 25,000 bales of October.

INTERNATIONAL HUNT FOR LOST BALLOONISTS

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 25.—After a search of forty-eight hours through the wilds of Ontario the government officials were convinced to-day that they were still without any news of the balloon America II, and its occupants, Alan R. Hawley and Augustus Post. The forest rangers who have thus far reported state that they have been unable to get any trace of the men. They were last seen over Michigan last Tuesday. The balloon ascended from St. Louis eight days ago.

Edward W. Cook of L. treWarren, Ind., arrived at Montreal to-day, after a moose hunt preliminary to the organization of an expedition for the relief of Mr. Hawley and Mr. Post.

The Canadian government to-day placed at the disposal of the American searchers the services of Lewis Burwash, one of the greatest expert geographers to plot out the probable course taken by the America over the Canadian territory. Lewis, spending most most from Toronto late last night but he was unable to get in touch with him in the search. He stated that he declared in the morning he is an expert on this work. His start into the Canadian wilds after the balloon as soon as his plans and a definite route is decided upon.

THORNTON A. SMITH NAMED FOR AUDITOR

EVERETT, Oct. 25.—Mayor Charles Bruce has sent to the Board of Aldermen the name of Thornton A. Smith as his appointee for city auditor to succeed Auditor Charles A. Ford. The name was sent in to the board at the [illegible] meeting, when action upon confirmation will take place. Mr. Smith is auditor for the New York & Boston Express, a position which he has held for seventeen years.

SENTENCED AS SHOPLIFTER.

On the charge of shoplifting to the theft of nineteen shirtwaists, Nellie Fraley, thirty, of Medford Hillside, was sentenced to serve four months in the House of Correction in the Municipal Court to-day. The shirtwaists were valued at $100.

GIRL FOUND INNOCENT IN CRIPPEN CASE

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Ethel LeNeve was acquitted by a jury in New Bailey this afternoon on the charge of being an accomplice to Dr. H. H. Crippen in the murder of Mrs. Crippen, Belle Elmore, the American variety actress.

It is for love of Miss LeNeve that Dr. Crippen, no wunder death sentence, murdered his wife. The Crown's counsel, Richard Muir, could not show that Miss LeNeve had any knowledge of either the American's intention or the crime itself.

Defence Calls No Witnesses.

There were no witnesses called by the defence. Immediately upon the conclusion of the speech of C. Smith, Miss LeNeve's attorney, Lord Chief Justice Alverstone delivered his charge to the jury and they retired, returning in twenty two minutes with the verdict of acquittal.

Smith made an eloquent appeal to behalf of his client and urged that she be acquitted.

"There are no grounds whatsoever for a verdict of guilty," said he. "Whatever this girl's mistakes may be, is not for your consideration. She has been sufficiently punished for the life she led by her experiences culminating in the knowledge that Crippen she loved was a murderer.

"I can only say personally, personally for not pulling her upon the witness stand to face a deadly cross-examination at the hands of Prosecutor Muir.

"Let those who may look in their minds to the time ten years ago when Dr. Crippen had asked Ethel LeNeve that she had guilty knowledge of the man's crime nor in the fact that he disguised herself," said Mr. Smith.

"She thought Crippen loved her and believed him when he told her that it was to protect her name that he was taking her boy across with him.

Lord Chief Justice's Remarks.

In summing up the case and instructing the jury Lord Chief Justice Alverstone said:

"The whole point in the case amounts to this: Did Ethel LeNeve know that Crippen was a murderer? Nobody ought to a woman harshly because she has trusted the husband who has engaged to her. Crippen's wickedness to blind and deceive her is apparent from the first.

During the summing up Winston Churchill, the Home Secretary, entered the Lord Chief Justice Alverstone upon the bench. He regarded Miss LeNeve curiously while Lord Chief Justice Alverstone charged the jury. It were a week before February 2 when Miss LeNeve will, upon her release from the prison, appear before the Police Court, and the jury retired.

Miss LeNeve's slim, girlish figure was the centre of interest as she stood before the bar and in a sweet low voice replied

INSANE SLAYER CRELEY SUICIDE

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 25.—George C. Creley, who was indicted in this city for the murder of Mrs. Edward B. Sleeper and committed to the State Insane Hospital at Bridgewater before the trial, committed suicide by hanging himself at the hospital Saturday night. The first news of his death was conveyed in a telegram to George Barnes, counsel for Creley, who had pleaded insanity.

He retired apparently in his usual spirits Saturday night, but was discovered hanging in his cell early Sunday morning. He had been his bed clothing into strips.

At the time of the murder he declared that he bought the revolver with which he shot Mrs. Shepherd to kill himself with, and nearly accomplished that purpose in his cell at the police station.

The principal reason for his shooting of his benefactor had been that she and her husband had discharged him from their passenger agent of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and had him to a private asylum a few weeks.

GERMAN AVIATOR KILLED BY A FALL

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—Aviation claimed its thirty-third victim within a year to-day, when Lieutenant Mouthe, one of the German army aviators, was killed at Magdeburg when his Wright biplane fell from a height of 600 feet.

BALDWIN IN DARING FLIGHT

AVIATION FIELD, Belmont Park, Oct. 25.—Women showed honors with men at the aviation meet here to-day. Count Jacques de Lesseps, the French aviator, made a flight shortly before 12 o'clock, carrying Miss Grace McKenzie of Toronto, who, according to rumor, is engaged to the aviator.

The aviator made several laps of the course at a height of sixty feet. As the craft passed the grand stand the fair passenger waved her hand toward the crowd. She appeared to be thoroughly enjoying her second trip with the noble aviator, having taken a flight yesterday in the same craft.

Miss Eleonora Sears of Boston was out on the aviation field early in the forenoon expecting to make a flight with Claude Grahame White, the English aviator, but had proceeded to take her go. Grahame-White had no sooner than this Farman biplane in starting, and that he first, losing her in another machine. Miss Sears expressed great disappointment.

Grahame White started on a short flight at a speed of fifty-five miles an hour in a machine belonging to Clifford Harmon.

De Lesseps in Second Flight.

De Lesseps made another flight, carrying Mrs. Mary Beardmore of Toronto. After he alighted, he again ascended, this time with Miss Ethel McKenzie, a sister to the first passenger. The aviator since the tournament opened Rene Simon, the Frenchman, took a trial help in his Herlot. He made four laps.

Captain Thomas J. Baldwin got out his biplane, "The Red Bug," to-day before the regular events were called and astounded the early comers by dashing over the course for a dozen laps at the terrific speed of seventy miles an hour.

Later on Baldwin made another flight, showing wonderful control of his aircraft in alighting on the second lap he steered his ship directly for his hangar, stopping within a few feet of the grand stand.

The spectators held their breath, fearing that the daring aviator would crash into the hangar. A minute later a burst of applause from the crowd in the grand stand announced the safe landing.

Aviation Course Denounced.

Also Baldwin described he denounced the aviation course as a menace to the contestants and predicted that if the course is took place as planned there would be loss of life.

"This course is the worst I have ever seen," he declared. "It is a menace to the aviator. Down at the north corner, where the trees are, the wind is very treacherous, and this point has been named 'The Graveyard.'"

As a result of Baldwin's attack on the course the American, French and English aviators are working over the existing conditions.

Alan Armstrong Drexel seemed to be the only contestant who was not kicking today. Although he succeeded in making the American aptitude record yesterday he announced to-day that he would go after the world's record of 1,760 feet, now held by Wymmler, a Dutch aviator, who recently went over the Eiffel Tower in Paris.

There has been broken out a sharp rivalry between Drexel and Walter Brookins, the Wright pupil, as a result of Drexel's victory yesterday. The contest between these two Americans is expected to furnish the thrills of the meet. The record height of 7,105 feet in his Herlot monoplane and the world's record of 1,760 feet, now held by Wymmler, a Dutch aviator, who recently went over the Eiffel Tower in Paris.

JUNK DEALER FINED UNDER NEW STATUTE

Joseph Beer, a junk dealer of No. 82 Atlantic avenue, was in Municipal Court to-day charged with buying new and unused material. It was the first case tried under the state law passed at the last legislature, imposing fines on junk dealers buying articles that have not been used. Beer was fined $10 on each count, and the same amount on the charge of not making a record of his purchase. George Coron, thirty years old, charged in the same case with selling goods to Beer, was given eight months in the House of Correction for larceny of bedding.

TWO ATTACKED BY LYNN BULLDOG

LYNN, Oct. 25.—Lynn had a mad dog scare this afternoon when several persons barely escaped from a bulldog on Franklin street. Twelve-year-old Stewart Roy of No. 48 Ontario street was badly bitten in the leg. Frank Connors, twenty-two, a boxer, living in Cliftondale, in this clothes tora.

to the court's interrogatories as to how she would plead.

"Not guilty, My Lord.

Lord Chief Justice Alverstone, who heard Crippen's case and sentenced the American to death, was a stern and solemn figure in his black robes as he entered the court.

Barrister Arthur Newton appeared as chief counsel for the girl. After Dew left the prison van which had brought her from Bidston jail policemen had to use force to make a path for her through the crowds of curious women. Inside the court room the spectators' seats were filled with the usual fashionably dressed women spectators. As Miss LeNeve entered women spectators stood up to get a better view of her. She was the pretty young prisoner who was led to her death by the cruel decree of the coroner's court in the hope that she would confess to the murder of Belle Elmore. Lines of automobiles and cabs filled before New Bailey Court his morning, during those who sought to attend the trial.

Only ticket holders were admitted to the courtroom, and to the seventy-five persons admitted before it was only a small sprinkling of men.

The grim, gloomy old court room was furnished with picture hats, waving plumes, fashionable furs and bright gowns. At 12 the LeNeve looked about the room and saw the faces of all convicted prisoners. Before court was opened Miss LeNeve and Mr. Newton held a long consultation.

The girl had removed her gloves and twisted them about her fingers in a nervous manner. Once she raised her veil for a moment and glanced at the faces of those about her she hastily lowered it again.

The indictment against the girl containing these words was read: "The prisoner, knowing the ill ill Crippen had murdered his wife did afterward feloniously receive, comfort, harbor, assist and maintain the said Crippen."

Those who were near enough to the girl to see closely saw that the color which had lured Crippen into murder had not returned to her cheeks.

Much Troubled in Mind.

One night when the girl returned from the house where she was then residing she seemed troubled and was suffering from a cough as though hard pressed.

Mrs. Jackson, the girl's landlady, noted her distress and sought to relieve her. In January Miss LeNeve had been in a troubled manner and had asked Mrs. Jackson the appearance of this girl was such as one would have who feared she was suffering outrage or injury. She was not suffering from any ordinary illness, but was evidently troubled in mind regarding over something.

"The night that Crippen returned home so thoroughly horror stricken — almost overwhelmed with the appearance of his little Elmore Crippen.

Mrs. Jackson said the main facts in the case were mainly undisputed.

Crippen had carried on a love intrigue with Miss LeNeve, and when the discovery came that the real motive that had led to the murder was Miss LeNeve.

The prosecution then outlined the case for the crown. Crippen, it was alleged, had two women to whom he was engaged to be married. One was Miss LeNeve and the other was Mrs. Crippen, who was in this country. It was found that no murder had been committed, and Crippen, it was alleged, had deserted his wife. LeNeve had a guilty knowledge of the murder and had received stolen property.

The prosecutor explained Mr. Muir's reasons for not calling Mrs. LeNeve's solicitor in January and February. He said because Crippen's solicitor was in communication with the lost body of Belle Elmore.

The prosecutor then read the statement which the girl had made to Inspector Dew on the night of her arrest. She said that Crippen had told her his wife died on the 31st of January.

Girl's Disguise as a Boy.

Miss LeNeve seemed astonished, but made no comment, according to Dew.

The prosecutor then swung round to the subject of the night when Belle had disguised herself as a boy.

"She has had opportunities to explain her conduct, but has never done so," said Mr. Muir, "I will also explain her conduct in a satisfactory manner, the only explanation that can be put upon it is that she knew all."

Inspector Dew, the Scotland Yard detective who trailed Crippen and his sweetheart across the Atlantic and captured them in Canada, was called to the stand.

The first important question asked by the prosecutor was whether he had seen Miss LeNeve at Crippen's home. "I did see there," said Dew emphatically.

Asked to relate the circumstances, he said that he visited Dr. Crippen's residence at No. 39 Hilldrop Crescent, North London, on July 8 and Miss LeNeve appeared at the door in response to the bell. She told him that she was Crippen's housekeeper. Later I questioned her closely and she admitted that she was his stenographer."

The witness said that afterward she told Detective Sergeant Dew that Crippen had told her early in February that his wife had gone to America and died there.

Girl's Case Is Helped.

Miss LeNeve's case was helped somewhat by the testimony of Inspector Dew, her lawyers thought.

When I charged the girl with being implicated in the murder of Mrs. Crippen after boarding the steamer Montrose she was pale and agitated and made no reply," the inspector said.

Later in my presence Captain Kendall of the Montrose asked Miss LeNeve if she

VALUABLE HOME RECIPE

Will Break Up Severest Cold in 1 Day and Cure any Curable Cough

Mix one-half ounce Pinex (50 cents worth of pine concentrated) with 2½ ounces of glycerine and a half pint of home made cough syrup, sugar syrup or honey. Shake thoroughly and take one teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Also a dose to children according to age. Almost any one can mix this.

This formula is used in more homes than any other cough medicine. The unpleasant cures are well known. It is pleasant to take, prompt and thorough in results, and the best of all throat and lung troubles. Stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours, relieves croup in one night, and is unequaled for whooping cough, bronchitis, hoarseness and all throat and lung troubles.

The Pinex is the only part of the mixture purchased in a drug store, and is the only part to get any value from. Insist on getting "2½ ounces" and don't accept substitutes. Hundreds of thousands have used this home remedy by this last winter.

BECAUSE—If through all this time the first prices had not been bargain prices, the lots would not have sold out quickly and the resulting losses of 25%, 50%, 75% and even 100% would have made it impossible to continue to do business on this plan.

BUT BECAUSE THE PRICES HAVE BEEN LOW the lots have sold out quickly, the Tunnel Bargain Basement has built up a reputation among the women of Greater Boston who appreciate its opportunities for savings, and the losses have been minimized by the fact that in the vast majority of cases there is practically nothing left at the end of two weeks.

WOMAN'S GREATEST PROBLEM TO-DAY IS "WHAT SHALL I WEAR?"

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, wife of the humorist, addressing the Young Women's Christian Association, said:

"The greatest problem confronting the women of to-day is 'What Shall I Wear?' It cannot be solved by spending more money on fabric half than on wholesome food, by investing a larger sum in muffinet tickets than in hosiery, or by paying more for chocolate creams than for underwear. The question can be solved by every woman, but wearing three to seven ostrich plumes in a picture hat and a bobbie skirt over shabby shoes are not ways to solve it.

French Officials Are "Condemned to Death."

PARIS—President Fallieres and the members of the cabinet are being guarded constantly as the result of the appearance of an Anarchistic circular condemning the ministers to death because of the conviction in the courts of the militant members among the railway strikers.

Chinese Parliament in 1913.

PEKIN—The Prince Regent has decided to grant an early opening of the Chinese Parliament. The probable date will be 1913 instead of 1916. Great enthusiasm has been aroused throughout the empire by the unanimous action of the Tzu-Cheng-Yuan on Saturday. The action, coupled with the government's financial difficulties, was the controlling factor in influencing the Regent. His decision was reached after a conference with the Princes and nobles.

New Fast Yacht by Fife.

LONDON—William Fife, the yacht designer, has accepted a contract to build a racing schooner for an owner whose name is not divulged. The avowed purpose of the owner, however, is to secure a racer capable of defeating the American schooner Westward, owned by Alexander S. Cochran of New York. Sailed by Captain Charles Barr, the Westward won the feature events at the Kiel and Cowes regattas last Summer.

Oil Trust Loses in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG—The Russian Government has declined the English proposal to arbitrate the steamer Oldhama dispute and the American request for compensation for the cargo, on the ground that the decision of the Russian courts that the cargo was contraband was final. The ship was a Standard Oil tank craft captured in the war with Japan and worth, with cargo, $500,000.

Charing Cross Bank Smash.

LONDON—Alfred Carpenter, the owner of the Charing Cross Bank, which closed its doors on October 17, issued to-day a statement. The number of creditors is about 25,000 and Mr. Carpenter places the liabilities at $12,500,000. The assets include $655,000 in cash, $300,000 in book debts and shares securities and properties of the value of $780,000.

Religion Taken from Schools.

LISBON—The secularization of the schools involves the replacement of religious instruction therein by systematic teaching of individual and civic morality. This is strongly favored by the reformers heading the Government.

Still Flies Royal Flag.

COLOMBO—The Portuguese battleship Vasco da Gama has sailed for Lisbon. She is still flying the royal flag. The Vasco de Gama is due to reach Lisbon by way of South Africa in January.

PANAMA CANAL LECTURE.

Captain Charles M. Fuller, formerly of the United States Navy, will give an illustrated lecture on "The Great Panama Canal," Thursday evening, October 27, in St. Mark's Parish Hall, Dorchester. Admission is free.

HATTIE LEBLANC IS ANXIOUS TO TELL HER STORY TO THE JURY

Work began in earnest to-day to prepare the case for and against Hattie Le Blanc, the seventeen-year-old girl who is to be placed on trial for her life on November 28 for the alleged murder of Clarence F. Glover a year ago in his Waltham laundry.

All New England, and even the Canadian provinces, are interested in this trial because of the mystery that shrouds the remarkable tragedy, and the fact that the pretty little girl charged with the grave crime came to this State from Cape Breton.

Although the case has been threshed out to some extent in the courts in the legal fight over the property left by Glover, it is hinted that there will be developments at the trial that will prove more sensational than anything that has yet been divulged.

Anxious to Face Jury.

These developments may be along the line of new arrests in connection with the Saturday night crime.

Charles E. Byrnes of the detective staff of District Attorney John J. Higgins, and Patrick McKenna, inspector of the Waltham police, have the preparation of the State's case in hand.

Melvin M. Johnson heads the list of counsel for Hattie Le Blanc. Mr. Johnson has Hattie's story of what took place at the laundry on the night of the tragedy and Hattie is anxious to take the witness stand and relate it to the jury.

Very little of Hattie's story has ever been allowed to reach the public. It has been told, however, to two or three people, and it is declared to be one of the most dramatic recitals ever heard.

Since her arrest three days after the shooting, having been dragged from under a bed in the Glover home, Hattie Le Blanc has been a prisoner in the East Cambridge Jail. During this year she has sobbing from a child into a woman—a development in both mind and body that is regarded as astonishing by her friends.

To Tell Story in English.

One of Hattie's new accomplishments is her ability to speak English. She has studied hard for a year her English-French elementary books for one purpose—to be able to tell her story to a jury in English.

"I have no fear of the result," she confided to one of her sisters. "If I can only tell my story—all of it—in court so that they can hear it without the use of an interpreter."

Not only can Hattie speak English fairly well, but what is of equal importance in connection with her trial, she can comprehend the questions that will be asked all of the witnesses in the case.

NEEDHAM WOMAN WHO IS SUING HUSBAND'S AUNT

MRS. ELIZABETH WEBBER

MRS. WEBBER EXPLAINS SUIT

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Webber, twenty-nine, prominent in Needham Church circles, went on the stand in the Norfolk Superior Court to-day before Judge Sherman and a jury to tell why she had instituted suit for $25,000 on the charge of alienation of the affections of her husband, George H. Webber, by his aunt, Mrs. Sarah A. W. Benbow. Mrs. Benbow, the defendant, is forty-eight years of age and has also been prominent in the Christian Science Church of Needham. She was too ill to appear in court to-day, and her deposition will be read as her testimony.

In telling her story, Mrs. Webber told the jury that her husband had often been closed by his aunt and that a telephone had been put in his home in order that she might call him up and talk to him.

"George and I were married in Norwood, September 28, 1904, after an engagement that extended over two years," said Mrs. Webber. "We lived there till the following March, when we were asked to come to Mrs. Benbow's to stay. We lived with her four weeks, and then took a house owned by George's aunt and across the street from where she lived.

Tells of Husband's Threat.

"Mrs. Benbow asked George to come over and make his home at her house for a month. She said she did not have room enough for me.

"George had always been in the habit of kissing me when he came from work. Mrs. Benbow would always object to this and would say, 'Kiss me, George, don't kiss Lizzie.' When Mrs. Benbow came over to our house she would kiss George the first thing, and then they would talk together quietly and she would whisper to him.

"In August of 1906 Mrs. Benbow had a telephone put in her house and she frequently called George up.

"George began to be unkind to me, and soon was paying no attention whatever. This was every time his aunt happened to be present. This feeling on his part increased as time went on. He threatened to shoot me one afternoon after he talked with Mrs. Benbow. I heard him tell his aunt that he would shoot me. Then he came over to the rear door of our house and chased me with a gun.

Says Furniture Was Removed.

"I ran out the front door and fell on the ground, remaining there some time. My baby was born the next month. My husband picked me up, saying, 'Lizzie, I'm very sorry for this; it's all her fault,' Mrs. Benbow said. 'It's good enough for her.'

"In 1905 Mrs. Benbow suggested that I go home to New Brunswick to see my mother. They wanted me to go on a visit. In the preceding Wednesday they began to take all their furniture out, and I thought little left.

"When I returned home from my stay, having died in the meantime, I went to Mrs. Benbow's and knocked at the door. George opened it, and then slammed it in my face. Since then I have been making my own living. That happened in 1905."

The case has been continued several times. Mrs. Benbow, the defendant, is represented by Attorney Harvey Pratt. Lawyer Granville Darling represented Mrs. Webber.

MISS CANFIELD A BRIDE AFTER 2-STATE DELAY

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 25.—Richard Canfield's daughter is to-day a bride, but if she had eloped and had been pursued to parental wrath instead of being accompanied by her mother and the conventional blessing, she could have encountered little more trouble, so perverse are the marriage laws of Rhode Island and Massachusetts and so finicky are officials. The seventeen-year-old daughter of the well known gambler and art connoisseur, with her mother and the bridegroom-elect, Michael E. Hennon of Boston, now manager of the Browning & King store in Providence, first sent an advance article to the Providence newspapers stating that the marriage had taken place. While it was being printed, they with Miss Marjorie Seney as bridesmaid, and Robert M. Geough as best man, tried to make the statement true.

The office of the city registrar was first visited. The Canfield party went through up to the point where, if being then disclosed that Miss Canfield was but seventeen, a request was made that she show that her father had consented. In this case necessary under the law. The bride-elect admitted she could not at that moment show that she had her father's consent. The clerk was sorry, but could do nothing.

It Was the Law.

Mrs. Canfield came to the rescue. She declared she could obtain the consent alone was not sufficient. Neither could the clerk.

"It's the law, you see, madam," he explained. "You are quite right, but what can I do?"

The city registrar upheld the clerk, and though Mrs. Canfield protested, he was the Supreme Court in this instance.

There was a conference. The result was that the party moved on to Attleboro, to see if the laws of Massachusetts were not more kindly. The city registrar's office was again the objective point of their attack. A license was applied for. Everything went all right up to the point where Mr. Hannon gave his address as Boston.

"It is customary, I believe, for a resident of this state to get a marriage license in the city of which he is a citizen," the clerk said.

Hannon explained that though he was a citizen of Boston, Providence had been of late his home. The clerk finally conceded the point.

Mother to the Rescue.

"Father's consent!" queried the clerk of the seventeen-year-old bride-to-be.

Miss Canfield was on the verge of tears But her mother again came to the rescue. And this time not without success. The clerk conceded another point.

"Well, perhaps you had better sign," he hesitated.

Mrs. Canfield seized the pen and signed before he could order a mental recount. The young people then went to the rectory of St. John's Church in Attleboro, where they were married by one of the priests. After the ceremony they returned to Providence in time to read the story of their marriage as they had written it for the afternoon papers.

FATHER ON TRAIL OF LONG LOST SON

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Oct. 25.—A young son and daughter of Henry Lloyd left their home in Haverhill, Mass., nearly a year ago. The father, accompanied by Police Officer Hussey, came here on a hunt for the boy, whom they failed to find. When taking the train home he accidentally ran into his daughter, who was purchasing a ticket in the depot, and who cleared up the mystery by informing her father that the son could be located in Hartford.

MRS. R. N. FAIRBANKS IS DEAD IN LONDON

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., Oct. 25.—News has been received of the sudden death in London, England, of Camilla van Kleeck Fairbanks, wife of Robert N. Fairbanks, formerly of St. Johnsbury, and for the past dozen years manager of the Fairbanks sales office in London. She was prominent among the social life of the American colony and had recently been re-elected president of the American women of London.

INJURED BY CAR, GETS $7,500 AWARD

William L. Sellon, a teamster, obtained a verdict for $7,500 against the Boston Elevated in the second jury session of the Superior Court before Judge Dana. He was driving on Blue Hill avenue, December 18, 1906, when a car struck his wagon, throwing him to the ground. He fell on his head, sustaining permanent injuries. His suit was for $50,000.

YOUNG DOCTOR DIES ON EVE OF WEDDING

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 25.—Dr. Lenox Gresham Walling, one of the leading younger physicians of Providence and a well-known graduate of Brown University, died at his home in Harrisville of typhoid. He was engaged to marry Miss Hazel M. Wheeler of Manchester, N. H., next month.

Webster's Matchless Dictionaries

The Greatest Value in a Really Fine Dictionary That Has Ever Been Offered in America

We advertised them three weeks ago and our stock was exhausted in a few days. We are just in receipt of one thousand more of them, which we offer at the same price. This dictionary is not printed from old plates, but is new and up-to-date, including many recent words not to be found in the older editions. It is beautifully bound in flexible real grain morocco. It is printed on very thin opaque imported Bible paper, and contains 1224 pages. It contains many pages of colored plates, as well as hundreds of illustrations.

Do not invest in a dictionary until you have compared these with any others offered at any approximate price. We want you to make this comparison, as we are confident that every word of praise we have for this book is justified. Our price for this regular $2.50 dictionary is only 89c

FOSS AND VAHEY OFF FOR A SPEAKING TOUR TO COVER THE STATE

Eugene N. Foss, Democratic candidate for Governor, Thomas F. Cassidy, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and James H. Vahey journey down to Brockton and Taunton to-night to pour Democratic oratory into the ears of Plymouth County voters and to assure them that they may best secure relief from the high cost of living by doing what they did in the Fourteenth Congressional contest last Spring—vote the Democratic ticket.

While Foss, Cassidy and Vahey are holding forth in Plymouth County, Charles F. Hamlin and Mayor Fitzgerald speak in Worcester at a big rally over which John R. Thayer presides. The Mayor speaks also before the Worcester Economic Club on "How German Cities Make a Profit Out of Public Utilities." The Mayor is expected to show, in some way, by letting the Democrats run things.

Tomorrow Barnstable County will be invaded for the greatest whoop-er-up campaign that Cape Cod has ever known—not even excepting the Foss campaign for Congress last Spring.

Thacher With Foss.

An army of 40 pointers was at large on the Cape to-day, covering the trees, fences and sides of barns in the district with mammoth posters advertising the Foss-Thacher tour of Cape Cod. Thomas C. Thacher, Democratic candidate to succeed Foss in Congress from the Fourteenth district, accompanies Foss on the tour. Other speakers will be Judge Charles C. Paine of Hyannis, Augustus L. Thorndike, the Democratic Senatorial nominee, John W. Dalton, candidate for Representative, Representative Thomas P. Riley of Malden and Charles S. Hamlin. Hamlin is the man on whom the Democrats are relying to "do things" on the Cape.

Mr. Foss stays over to-night in Taunton and starts off early to-morrow for the tour of the Cape. Eleven rallies are scheduled. The itinerary is as follows: 10:10 A.M., Barnstable, E. S. Pehlman's store; 10:40, Hyannis, Depot square; 11:40, Centerville, near postoffice; 12:40 P. M., Marstons Mills, near postoffice; 1:20, Cotuit, near postoffice; 2:00 Falmouth, near town hall; 2:45, Woods Hole, near depot square; 3:30, Buzzards Bay, near railroad station; 4:30, Onset, near postoffice; 6:00, Wareham, near railroad station.

Democrats See Big Results.

Big things for the Democratic ticket are expected to be brought about through this tour of the Cape. It is the beginning of the twenty-after whirlwind tour of the whole State. Every day will be given over to rallies in the small towns, while the nights will be devoted to rallies in the big towns. On Saturday night, after the tour of the Cape town, the Democrats have set forth in New Bedford and Fall River.

The whirlwind idea has made good, the rallies held in Faneuil Hall on Saturday night, Last night's tour of Greater Boston, with talks in Hyde Park, Quincy, Brookline and Cambridge was a decided success. The audiences were received enthusiastically at every stop.

CURLEY HOLDS A RALLY AT NOON

Councilor James M. Curley, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Tenth District, addressed a large gathering of employes of the wool, sugar and leather districts at a noon rally to-day at Melcher and A streets, South Boston.

Candidate Curley holds open-air rallies to-night at Hamilton and Bowdoin streets, 7 p.m.; Dove street and Blue Hill avenue, 8:30; Upham's Corner, 9:00; Cottage and Dudley streets, 9:30.

"At to-day's rally, Mr. Curley said in part:

"The problem of the hour is indeed a very simple one. Either the necessities of life are too high or wages are too low. The cause is clearly understood. The Republican party has surrendered to the trust magnates and the highest tax has been levied upon the necessities of the poor and lowered upon the luxuries of the rich. This situation can all come about under Republican rule during the past dozen years and a vote for Mr. Galvin is a continuance of this policy."

FIRES IN GARAGE MENACE, SAYS DALY

Fire Commissioner Daly has informed Mayor Fitzgerald that the frequency of fires in garages is alarming and that something should be done to keep garages out of the thickly settled districts. He said that since January 1 there have been eighteen fires in garages, one of which necessitated the sounding of five alarms and another four. He said that in one garage 172 fires have occurred in two years.

PRACTICE COLLEGE CHEER FOR GAME

After a lapse of a number of years the Boston College eleven will play with Holy Cross at Worcester, next Saturday. In anticipation of the game a mass meeting to hold this afternoon in the college hall on James street, to arouse interest in next Saturday's game and to practice the regulation cheers and yells.

G. O. P. ORATORS OFF TONIGHT ON WESTERN TOUR

Governor Draper, Senator Lodge, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and the other Republican spellbinders journey out to the Connecticut river valley to-night for rallies at Springfield, Northampton and Amherst. Congressman Gillett, who represents the district in Washington will good father the tour.

The Connecticut valley rally audiences have always showed a liking for oratory of the "keen arrow" style, and the G. O. P. managers, remembering this, have booked Representative Robert M. Washburn of Worcester for to-night's events. Washburn will spend most of his time in the city of Springfield.

There was more or less alarm at Republican headquarters in the Kimball building to-day when it was known that the Democrats have been doing the G. O. P. folks to bookings for rallies on the Cape. Barnstable County leaders fairly flocked into headquarters to-day, and told Chairman Hatfield what they thought of getting Foss got the ears of the Cape votes first. There was considerable scampering around and looking up dates, and it is expected that the Republican spellbinders will get down to the Cape early next week.

The Republicans are considerably worked up, too, over the barrel of money that is being offered on State street and elsewhere on Foss to win. The Republicans, for some reason or other, are fighting shy of this chance to make or lose money.

Line Up District Leaders.

Chairman Hatfield spent the best part of the day meeting Republican district leaders who have been "off" and filing them up. The force of scouts at headquarters have been busy corralling the "off" ones and looking them up to see Hatfield.

Chairman Hatfield instructed his lieutenants in charge of the rally forces to-day to make as many bookings as possible for small towns. The cities are not to be neglected, however, but special attention must be given to the towns. Essex County, Norfolk County, the Cape, the lower section of Middlesex County and the Marlboro district, in Worcester County, Springfield was marked out on the map for Governor Draper.

The G. O. P. leaders found a bit of cheer to-day in a letter from Major Henry L. Higginson, endorsing Governor Draper's candidacy for reelection.

PLAY WHIST FOR COLLEGE FUND

The first of a series of whist parties to be given in aid of the new Boston college building fund, under the auspices of St. Botolphe's Guild, orchester branch No. 1, will be held at the Colonial Club, Park and Washington streets, Dorchester, next Thursday evening. The committee includes Miss E. G. Leonard, president. Mrs. Charles Ochs, Mrs. James V. Tobin, Mrs. James H. Glynn, Mrs. Peter Rooney, Mrs. John Morton, Mrs. James Kavanaugh, Mrs. James E. Kent, Mrs. M. E. Roach, Miss A. M. Leonard.

Political News

These are great times for the printers. Councilman Curley is distributing 300,000 flyers on the high cost of living that puts the blame squarely on the Republican party. The Democratic State committee thinks as well of the arguments presented that they are having 500,000 printed for circulation at rallies and by the city and town committees throughout the State.

* * *

Representative William H. O'Brien is so certain that Massachusetts is to repeat the Democratic record recorded in Maine that he says anybody is foolish who would not accept a Democratic nomination for any office at the state election. Eugene Gardner's blunt willingness to accept responsibility for being one of the sponsors for the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill will be enough to elect O'Brien to Congress in Billy's opinion.

* * *

The Lyman School investigation has been brought into the campaign as an issue against Representative Harry Ham of Ward 20. Patrick H. Kelley, counsel for the Democratic Executive Association, is stumping the Eighth Senatorial district for Martin P. Carley, the Democratic candidate because he declares that Ham's autocratic conducting of the school investigation resulted in a deliberate whitewash.

* * *

Sherman L. Whipple's entry into active politics has made a big hit with the Democrats. He is doing all that he can to assist Assessor Daniel J. Daley of Brookline in the campaign for Congressman Weeks, and he will make several speeches for him this week.

* * *

Mayor Fitzgerald figures that Keliher will be beaten by 5,000 votes as an Independent candidate for Congress. He is willing to concede him a good vote in Ward 2, and perhaps in East Boston, but he says that this will be more than offset by the tremendous vote that William F. Murray, the Democratic candidate, will get in the Seventh ward, Wards 3 and 4. "Keliher hasn't got a chance in the world," says the Mayor.

* * *

Jim Keaney, the bandmaster, will have his musical companions help him out in a couple of rallies which he will hold in Ward 21, where he is a Democratic candidate for the House. Keaney expects to win the seat of Representative Rousmaniere, Republican, who he has dubbed the "professional reformer."

* * *

Lawrence F. Shannon, formerly of Ward 20 and now of Medford, has the reputation on State street of never having picked a loser in a political contest. Shannon is staking his reputation as a dopester on Foss the Democratic candidate, and has laid $500 against $400 on the Congressman to win. The wager was made during a ball on the Curb Exchange yesterday.

* * *

One of the brilliant young orators of the Republican band of spellbinders is ex-Councilman Walter R. Meins of Ward 21. He won his spurs as a talker in a vain attempt to defeat Mayor Fitz. Some of the machine leaders at the State House that the Councilman Council should not be abolished, but now he is right in line with the machine leaders and will go to the House of Representatives in 1912 as his reward.

BELVA LOCKWOOD IS 80.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Belva Lockwood, lawyer, publicist, the only woman who ever ran for President and the first to ride a velocipede, is eighty years old to-day.

ABOUT TEETH FROM THE Chicago Journal

The one voluntary activity in which every human being must engage is talking. Every time you speak or smile you exhibit at least a flash of your teeth. No feature of personal appearance is as important as the mouth.

The young man or woman who desires to create a favorable impression may be neatly clothed, clean-handed and present a countenance that shines with cleanliness. But the instant that a word or a smile brings into view a line of discolored, ditty teeth, the keen observer knows that the polish of that particular young person is all on the outside.

The slicker may be seen, the clothing threadbare; if the first word from the applicant for a place reveals clean teeth the impression must be favorable.

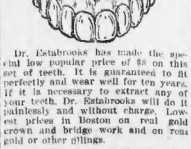
Even the practical standpoint of profit it pays to take care of the teeth.

* * *

If you cannot avail yourself of Dr. Estabrooks' Alveolar system of replacing lost teeth without the aid of an artificial set or the old style crown or bridgework, and find that you must have a set of teeth, call on Dr. Estabrooks and let him explain about the superiority of the Anchor Denture plate over the old style set.

Be Sure to get the Anchor Denture Plate, the latest and best.

Unlike the ordinary set of teeth, Dr. Estabrooks' Anchor Denture Plate is roofless. This construction allows you to talk and taste perfectly. It is cool, comfortable, clean and fits better. It never drops, shifts or displaces, to cause wearer embarrassment.



Dr. Estabrooks has made the special low popular price of $8 on this set of teeth. It is guaranteed to fit perfectly and wear well for ten years. If it is necessary to extract any of your teeth, Dr. Estabrooks will do it painlessly and without charge. Low-set prices in Boston on real gold crown and bridge work and on rose gold or other alloys.

GUM-SHOE MEN LOOT ROOMS IN HARVARD YARD

Soft-footed burglars with unbobbed marks of the reel thing visited Harvard College yard early to-day, combed through the sleeping apartments of a number of students who were safely wrapped in the embrace of Morpheus, and carried away cash, pins and fountain pens.

These particular marauders seemed to have a penchant for fountain pens, and the detectives that were detailed on the case to-day are looking Boston over for pens of all descriptions.

The night-hawks are devotees of the fresh air treatment for brain development, and they sleep with their windows up. That was the situation in Room No. 4 of Hollis Hall, where Charles H. Blanchard slept sweetly while the intruder got away with his valet containing two $2 bills.

New Sort of College Yell.

In Stoughton Hall lives L. R. Rose, and when he retired last evening he had $7.75 in his clothes, because he counted it. He has also an athletic pass which he valued at more than the $7.75. When he reached into his trousers pocket early to-day he found that money and pass were gone, wherefor he raised a college yell that is not on the books. While he was voicing his disapproval, his roommate, Frank C. White, joined in the wail.

"They've got my fountain pen!"

Just about this time in room 2 of the same building somebody was being made to ill. Spofford to the effect that some one had stolen, seized and otherwise confiscated $4 in good money and likewise a fountain pen. In the same room an examination made by C. W. Washburn revealed that his working capital of $1 and a fountain pen were missing.

Wow! Cries Mr. Stover.

In room No. 18 the voices of J. C. Howard and A. S. Stover bewailed the fact that the former had lost $4 in cash, a gun metal watch that kept good time and a fountain pen.

"Darn that guy kickin' about your old gun metal watch for!" cried Stover to Howard. "They've swiped me solid gold watch, pen and coin to no for diligence and other things. Wow! Wow!"

The visitors may have called on more students, but these were the only ribs reported to the police.

This is the first wholesale burglary of the kind at Harvard since the Raffles-like stealing a few years ago when the students lost thousands of dollars.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

BRAVE SKIPPER STICKS BY HIS DOOMED SHIP

Somewhere in the Gulf of Mexico the bravest skipper on the Atlantic seaboard, Captain E. B. Walls of Hallowell, Me., is waiting for a tow. If his vessel, the four-masted schooner Hollisewood, holds together, and the food lasts, he may be rescued, but while there is in the slightest possibility of the ship being saved the captain is resolved to stay aboard.

Although he knows the boat is waterlogged and has barely held together after a few days' buffeting by the fiercest hurricane that has swept the gulf in years, he told his crew who were taken off by the steamship Harold last Monday that he would stick to the ship.

"Save yourselves, lads," he told them. "I'll wait for a tow."

Begs Captain to Leave Ship.

The mate of the Hollisewood, Paul Mangold, went back to his captain and begged him to come. He pointed out that if the hurricane lasted another day the schooner would go to the bottom, and reminded the captain that Mrs. Walls was waiting for him in Maine.

"Come, captain, leave my ship, mate," replied the captain. "It is my duty to stay aboard my ship though I have to lash myself to the deck, and I'm going to stay here until I can get a tow, or until the schooner goes down."

The crew of seven men were transferred to the Herold and the steamship resumed its trip for New York. Captain Walls was seen clinging to the capstan, while seas, mountains high, broke over the schooner and rolled her almost over. Last night the revenue cutter Forward left Key West in search of the Hollisewood.

Had Cargo of Lumber.

The schooner left New Orleans on October 1 for New York with a $20,000 cargo of cypress lumber, part of the cargo being carried on deck. A fair breeze carried the schooner almost to Havana, but on the night of October 11 the wind became shifty, and by early morning a strong gale was blowing.

By night the gale developed to a hurricane that was, perhaps, the worst the Gulf of Mexico has ever seen. On Friday, the 14th, the schooner's canvas had been carried away and nothing but bare poles were standing. The next morning part of the deckload began to break through the moorings and was washed away. By night water had filled the hold and the lumber began to float, smashing against the sides of the schooner.

HALE FUND OVER $11,000.

Kidder, Peabody & Co. to-day announced that contributions to the fund to erect a statue of the late Edward Everett Hale amount to $11,827.09. The amount previously acknowledged as having been received was $9,850.00.

BROUCHT COLOR TO HER CHEEKS

Tonic Treatment Was What This Buffalo Woman Needed and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Just Fitted Her Case.

To keep the system in normal condition, the appetite good, the step vigorous, the brain clear and the muscles strong, a tonic is sometimes necessary. With the body thus toned up and the organs active there is a greatly reduced danger from prevalent diseases since the germs are overcome and passed off as nature intended they should be.

Whenever the blood becomes thin and watery or impure the whole system suffers, energy is lacking, vitality is low and the victim often has reason to fear consumption, a danger which actually existed in the following case:

"I am glad to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," says Mrs. Roderick D. MacLeay, of No. 8 Parkview avenue, Buffalo, N. Y. "I feel that they have been of wonderful benefit to me. A few years ago I was completely run down through overwork and worry. My blood was thin and watery and I was very pale. I grew gradually worse for a year and was weak as a rule of my strength, especially when I walked up stairs, which I could not do without resting every few steps. I could not even walk across the room without being out of breath.

"I was under the doctor's care throughout the entire winter. He said I was in a flu state and no consumption, and that I needed something to build me up. I was not benefited by his treatment and began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after I had been sick four six months. I noticed right away that the pills were helping me, for my cheeks began to have some color and I felt stronger. Indeed, I was completely cured after giving the pills a thorough trial. I will be glad if, through this statement of my case, only some other person afflicted as I was is restored to health by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are always the same and are sold only in packages bearing the well-known trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." Pills sold in any other package or loose, by the dozen or hundred are not the same, whatever the dealer tells you. The genuine are sold by all druggists or will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

ARCHBISHOP OPENS NEW ST. MARY'S HALL

The new gymnasium of the St. Mary's Catholic Association, connected with the St. Mary's Church of the Annunciation, Cambridge, was formally opened and a fountain given by Cambridge citizens in memory of the Rev. Thomas Scully, late pastor of the church unveiled and dedicated. More than 3,000 Cambridge citizens of all creeds attended the exercises.

The building, which cost $80,000, and takes the place of Father Scully's gymnasium, burned in May, 1909, is a brick structure at Harvard and Prospect streets, complete in every detail of equipment. The Scully memorial fountain is of Vermont marble and stands at the entrance of the new building.

The fountain was unveiled by Miss Mary G. Foxcroft, daughter of Civil Service Commissioner Foxcroft, of Cambridge. The presentation speech was made by Mayor Brooks. William J. O'Donnell, vice-president of St. Mary's Catholic Association, accepted the fountain. Theodore H. Raymond delivered a eulogy of the late priest. There were also speeches made by Archbishop O'Connell, the Rev. Michael J. Dooly, pastor of St. Mary's Church; James J. Casey, president of the association; Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and Mayor John F. Fitzgerald. Edward A. Sullivan of Boston College gave an original ode, and John D. Whelsky sang.

The guests included Speaker Walker, Congressman McCall and Congressman Foss.

Archbishop O'Connell said in part:

"If the representatives of city and State here present find, as naturally they do, cause for profound congratulation in this splendid building and the institutions it houses, it is because they see in all that it represents or suggests the life that is according to its own methods will do something for the government, the stability and the order of citizenship.

"To us Catholics, to this parish and to our whole diocese it means all of that and much more. To us it is another of the many means and methods which the Holy Mother Church in her wisdom uses primarily for the sanctification of man, and secondarily for every other phase of human life which harmoniously blends with that.

"Man is not merely spirit, nor is he merely a brute. He is a composite being made up of the material body animated by a spiritual soul, and this composite being attains its ideal condition when as the classics put it hundreds of years ago there is 'mens sana in corpore sano'—that is, when there is a sound mind in a sound body.

"It is this blending, this harmonious interaction of the one factor or portion of man's makeup upon the other that brings harmony and equilibrium, in profound order and stability that make the true man, the lovely sound body with its inseparable mind, which is quite possible and is indeed oftentimes a matter of fact, this is the ideal of a man.

"Neither can a perfectly sane mind in a body filled with ills and weaknesses be said to compose the true ideal man. Therefore neither one or the other of the composite parts of this being can be neglected. Each must be cared for and considered in its own order. That of the spiritual is infinitely above the material, so naturally the first consideration, the first dignity of man is his immortal soul.

ORDER SPECIAL NUMBER NOW

Get together. Work together. Forward. Get together and work together for Boston and New England. That is the watchword proclaimed in the great New England number of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN which will be published next Sunday and will be one of the biggest and best newspapers ever printed in New England.

Make no mistake—get your order in early if you want to know what is being done to boost Boston and New England and how you can help shove the good work along.

The achievements of the past are fascinatingly and the great part that New England has played in the development of the nation. The present commercial supremacy of New England is emphasized and the reasons for it made plain. But, more than all, the call is sounded for all to join in and help, not only to maintain New England's present supremacy in the Union, but to make it greater and to make the whole nation strive for greatness by setting the standard.

Leading men of New England point the way. Governor Draper speaks for Massachusetts, Governor Fernald for Maine, and Governor Quinby for New Hampshire, while Mayor Fitzgerald looks beyond the limits of New England and even beyond those of the greater city and forecasts the future greatness of all New England.

The story of the railroads, the story of manufacturing, the story of religion, the story of education, the story of recreation, the story of music all these, and more, in so far as they relate to New England are told in the great New England number of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. You cannot afford to miss it and if you have not already notified your newsdealer to save you a copy you should do so without delay.

Puzzling Hair Questions.

The questions are how can I make my hair more beautiful? How can I stop it from falling out? How can I prevent the formation of scales and dandruff? The answer is simple. Shampoo your head frequently with a preparation made of [illegible] soap, which cleans away dirt, dust and germs; Glycerin, which softens and soothes the scalp and is a valuable healing agent; Water of Life, which [illegible] scaly matter; Cocoanut Oil, which gives the hair a beautiful gloss and prevents the dry condition which results from using ordinary soaps or shampoos; Salicylic Acid, [illegible] antiseptic that removes germs, bacteria and disagreeable odor—common sense reasons appeal to you, buy a tube of Bird's Head Wash, which is made of all the above described ingredients, and your hair troubles will be at an end. Sold by dept. and drug stores at 25c and 50c.

ONE-HALF BOTTLE OF THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY ACCOMPLISHES WONDERS.

When I sent for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, I had to make water every two or three hours through the day and night. I passed but a very small quantity, but with a scalding and straining at the end of each passage. Before I received sample by mail, I went to our best doctor (and he is second to none in this vicinity) and told him how I felt. He put me up a bottle of medicine. I was about a week taking the medicine, but was no better than when I began. I then began your sample bottle, and before I got through with it, I felt a change. The scalding sensation did not bother only a few times in the middle of the day. I would not have believed such a small quantity would have done so much, but before it was gone I learned that our druggist kept Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and so got a large bottle for one-dollar but actually worth one hundred dollars. I only took one large tablespoonful three times a day and before I had taken one-half bottle I was all right and have been since. Gratefully yours, GEORGE S. CHAMPLIN.

PRIEST IS TO HAVE MONUMENT ON BATTLEFIELD

A monument will be unveiled on Gettysburg battlefield Saturday to the memory and patriotic priest, the Rev. William J. Corby, C. S. C., who was chaplain of the Second Division of the Second Army Corps, which was commanded by General Hancock in the Civil War. The memorial was provided for out of a fund appropriated by Congress.

A large delegation of Bostonians will attend the exercises. Among those will be Mrs. Thomas Murphy, Mrs. Dennis J. Fitzgerald, Miss Minnie Burns, Miss Nellie Riley, Miss Mary Murphy, Miss Agnes Moore, Miss Nellie O'Brien, Miss Mary Cronin, Miss Annie Cronin and Miss Mary Costello.

Campfire en Program.

The program includes a campfire the day preceding the dedication, at which there will be speeches on the battle of Gettysburg by General Hancock, Birkins and Dr. Daniel Gallagher, the noted Dublin preacher. Saturday morning there will be a solemn high mass at St. Francis Xavier church. At 10:30 o'clock in the church there will be a public meeting, presided over by Mayor Blankenburg, at which the Rev. T. W. Hayes, pastor of the church, will make the address of welcome. Gov. Edwin S. Stuart, ex-Governor Pennypacker, Dr. Russell H. Conwell, Congressman Thomas S. Butler, Dr. William S. Murphy, mayor of Germantown, and Rev. Mgr. Lavelle will be present.

Oration by Father Lyons.

The opening exercises take place in the morning. The oration will be delivered by the Rev. W. Lyons, D. D., president of St. Joseph's college, Philadelphia. While the literary guild of Philadelphia will provide the banquet, the Knights of Columbus, Assumption Society of Philadelphia, Henry Burns, president, will provide the staging used in the National Pole Vault meet in Boston last June. Mr. Burns is a member of Mr. Corby's old regiment.

OLD FRIAR LYNN

By MORTON BIRGE

Friar Lynn, an Oxford monk, discovered the North Pole in 1900 by Black Art.—Knox note.

Old Friar Lynn was a wise old owl
And a shrewd old soul was he
He never fussed around with a gun—
Stop that.
Nor bothered with notes and a faked-up date
But he played "Black Art" and he played it straight.

For a wise old guy was he Old Friar Lynn was an earnest chap,
And a fair paid was he,
But he shouldn't have lived in this speeding age,
Or, possibly, commonsense the modern page.
Though he tried right hard, did he.

Oh Friar Lynn was no imbecile,
No loony lad was he.
He came back home from a foreign part
And said: "Hope to die and I cross my heart,
But I went to the Pole by good Black Art.
Black Art—that's all," said he.

Old Friar Lynn was a dexterous con,
Got away with the goods, did he,
They didn't know much in that early set,
So that "Black Art" gag was strong, you bet,
His bluff went good and it's going yet.

A wise old owl was he.

MAN'S BODY TIES UP ROAD

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Oct. 25.—Michael O'Neil of Nashua was electrocuted at noon today in the power plant of the Hampton Light and Power Company in that city, and all the electric cars between here and the former town were temporarily tied up until his body could be removed from the wires on which it was found lying. He was sustained the shock of 13,400 volts.

It is supposed that O'Neil went to the plant to get free lodgings. He went to sleep with his head against the buff car, and was killed when the current was turned on.

DOCTORS TO DISAPPEAR, SAYS CABOT

The extermination of the physician who works for pay is predicted by Dr. Richard C. Cabot of Harvard Medical School. Dr. Cabot bases his belief on the fact that municipal Boards of Health and free hospitals are doing the work better.

The doctor chose for his theme "The Doctor's Dilemma," as admitted to the members of the Channing Club at the Parker House that he plagiarized the title from G. Bernard Shaw.

"The dilemma is one," said Dr. Cabot, "which really means the extermination of the doctor. To you it does not seem possible, but from our point of view it is different. This thing has come about during the past ten years and is due to the activity of the cities and towns in matters of health.

"I was recently called to a case in New Hampshire, and the old physician there told me that his livelihood had really been taken away by the up-to-date methods and new cures. 'Why, said the old doctor, 'we have none of those epidemics of diphtheria, scarlet fever and others, which we used to get our harvests from.

"We have not as yet national health authorities, but we are going to have them. The work along the line so far has been mostly legislation, and not action. Yet what has been done has done the doctors. Take the instance of the soothing syrup. The pure food law has put a stop to the placing of the amount of drug used right on the bottle. As a result, the fond mother does not drug the child now and call in the doctor to prescribe for the relief of the drug she has given the child days, and the doctor is out just so much.

FOREIGN MISSION WORKERS COMING

Among the interesting delegates to the General Executive meeting to be held at Temple Street Church, October 27 to November 3, are Dr. Rosetta Sherwood Hall, a physician from Korea; Dr. Anna D. Gloss of Peking in charge of the Elizabeth Sleeper Dark Hospital which was destroyed during the Boxer movement; Miss Eva Bruce, and Miss Halle Garthald, the grand-daughter of the Liberator, now in charge of the large school conducted by the Women's Foreign Missionary Society in Via Nomentale, Rome. Mrs. S. M. Eddy and Miss Cora Morgan, engaged in work among the Guyarati people in Bombay, India.

ATLANTIC SHORE LINE TO BE SOLD

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 25.—A decree ordering the sale of the Atlantic Shore Line Railway to satisfy the claims of the bondholders, who on September 23 filed a petition for a foreclosure under their mortgage, has been issued in the United States circuit court. The sale will be held at Alfred on December 1 at 2 p. m. Arthur A. Merrill of Lisbon Falls will be appointed special master to conduct it. The proceedings are in part of a plan agreed upon by the bondholders for a reorganization of the railroad company.

EXPOSITION MANAGER TALKS OF SUCCESS

C. H. Greene, one of the managers of the Mechanics Exposition, gave 200 boys of the High School of Commerce zones, for the benefit of his pet hobby, efficiency, once in a lunchhour chat. Mr. Green insisted that none of the first requisites for success in business was a sound body and vigorous constitution. The goal aimed at should be the securing of a good, steady work for it. Mr. Oscar Gallagher, principal of the school led the boys in a vote of thanks to the speaker.

ADAMS LOANS AT HIGH RATE, SAYS WEBBER

Thomas H. Sealey, a former employe of A. D. F. Adams, the Boston broker under trial charged with stealing from his customers, and also a defendant in the suit of F. Agassiz Heinze to recover $300,000 in securities that he claims Adams and others disposed of illegally, testified as a witness for the government telling of Adams's methods of doing business and naming the men from whom Adams borrowed money.

Sealey worked for Adams in 1908 and until late in 1909. He named many of the men from whom Adams borrowed money, and stated that Adams paid from 4 to 5 per cent. for the use of the money. An objection from Attorney Bowley to this line of testimony brought from Assistant District Attorney Webber the declaration that the government intended to prove that Adams frequently made loans for which he charged from 50 to 86 per cent. yearly interest.

Sealey testified that in some cases made five notes for Adams, but that he never knew the rate of interest charged. He said he thought it was usually 6 per cent. A number of Adams's books were introduced. The books and the greater part of Sealey's testimony were admitted conditionally.

ABANDON AUTO AND GIRL PASSENGERS

Three young women, for riding in the Fenway early to-day, were attacked by their two male companions, who abandoned the girls and the automobile in the park near Boylston street. Back Bay, and fled. Many people living in the fashionable apartment houses in the vicinity were awakened by the screams of the young women. Word was sent to police headquarters, but a careful search of the entire Fenway failed to reveal trace of the two men. The young women were taken to the stables house but refused to give their names. A quarrel between a girl and one of the men is said to have started the trouble.

HOLD UP WOMAN, ELUDE PURSUIT

Five young men who held up and attempted to rob a woman on Merrimac street, near the corner of Chardon street, West End, early to-day, escaped after a long chase by Patrolman Peterson of the Joy street station, during which the policeman fired several shots. Peterson was walking along Merrimac street when he heard a woman's screams. He emptied his revolver without hitting any of the quintet who ran away. Peterson continued the chase for several blocks but was finally obliged to give it up.

BURSTING

Headaches That Drive Women Distracted. Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great specific.

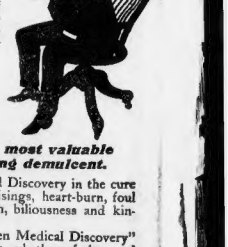
Headache is the commonest form of misery, but it's awfully wearing. By the time you get used to headaches your beauty has fled forever.

Mrs. H. Fulmer, 178 Springfield Ave., Newark, N. J., says:

"I had been suffering for a long time with headache and backache. I expected to be confined, and I suppose that made me worse, but my back ached sometimes so I could hardly get around. I had dizzy spells, too, and I didn't sleep nights. I was afraid to go from home for fear I would get sick and destroyed continually. I couldn't get back. I felt just no help. One day my husband came home and got me to take Dr. Greene's Nervura. It helped me right away, added to and would be a good thing to stop my backache. I took it, and I am thankful to say it helped me wonderfully. I believe it to be a splendid help for all women in our condition. Its sustaining power is simply wonderful. It strengthened my entire system. My back ache and headache were both cured. I got rid of the extra nervousness, dizziness, etc. Greene's Nervura (blood and nerve remedy) strengthened my nerves and enabled me to stand it. I recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to all nervous women, and I give this letter for their benefit."

Constant headaches and backaches will ruin your health and your life. They will wreck your disposition and make you old. Other troubles will follow, perhaps, and most likely are upon you now. Drive them back, and help yourself with Dr. Greene's great medicine. Special advice is yours free for the asking. Call or write to Dr. Greene, 34 Temple Place, Boston, Massachusetts.

A SQUARE-DEAL



Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and these are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found growing in our American forests and while potent to cure are perfectly harmless—even to the most delicate women and children.

Not a drop of alcohol enters into their composition. A much better agent is used both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles in them, viz.—pure triple-refined glycerine. This agent possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable antiseptic and antiferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, heart-burn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or other organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if its use be persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures even the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on-coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate, chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

To find out more about the above mentioned diseases and all about the body in health and disease, get the Common Sense Medical Adviser—the People's Schoolmaster in Medicine—revised and up-to-date book of 1000 pages—which treats of diseased conditions and the practical, successful treatment thereof. Cloth-bound sent post-paid on receipt of 31 cents in one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION

Quickly Cures Rheumatic Pains. Also Splendid System Builder.

The ounce compound syrup of Sarsaparilla, and one ounce Toris compound. Add these to a half pint of first class whiskey—or sherry wine if it is preferred—and use a tablespoonful before each meal and on bed time. The bottle must be well shaken each time. This simple remedy is one of the most effective known. The restorative action will be felt after the first few doses.

This formula is also especially beneficial to old people and all persons afflicted with feeble strength, as it will eventually restore full physical vigor, eradicating acids in the blood and promptly stopping rheumatic pain and backache.

Any one can mix this. If your druggist does not have these ingredients in stock he can quickly get them from his wholesale house. This was published here last winter and helped hundreds.

PRIESTS IN PLAY PORTRAY SELVES

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—In a play written for them by Patrol Sergeant J. Carroll of the Summerdale police station, seven Roman Catholic priests will appear on the morrow evening. The sketch is entitled "A Night with Father Scanlon." It will be given at St. John's Hall for the benefit of the church.

The plot is unique, as the priests portray themselves. Father Scanlon of St. John's church plays the title role. There are two laymen in the cast, the sexton and the janitor. Several priests, well known to their parishioners for musical skill, will take part.

WATTERSON'S SON INDICTED

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Harding Watterson, son of Colonel Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, has been indicted for assault in the first degree, charged with shooting Michael J. Martin to Martin's screen at Saugerties on July 1. William D. Brinnler, Watterson's counsel, will appeal for a commission to determine his sanity.

CHURCH LOOKING FOR RED RATHER THAN BLUE BLOOD

The lesson of the National Council, was that the Congregational Church is learning to pay less attention to the cultural kind of education and putting stress on the brain efficiency kind. We are not belittling the culture of the school but are working for brain efficiency. We are looking not for blue blood but for red blood. The church is reaching out more and more after the rank and file.—The Rev. Clarence U. Swift, Fall River, to Congregational Club.

Blue Ribbon Day at Gilchrist's, Wednesday, Oct. 26th

The first "Blue Ribbon Day" in our enlarged store, and we are determined that it shall transcend every former event of its kind in Bargain Values, in attendance, and in volume of business

We couldn't make a stronger statement than the above if we tried. "Blue Ribbon Day" was originated by us. It is a "copyrighted" Gilchrist Sale day. We have made our "Blue Ribbon Day" the talk of New England through the giving of the greatest Bargain Values you have ever secured. We tell you emphatically that Wednesday, October 26th, our first Blue Ribbon Day in our enlarged store, will be the crowning day of our selling career and a day of incomparable savings to you.

More people will come to Gilchrist's Wednesday than ever attended any former Blue Ribbon Day Sale. The adding of our new Hamilton Place and Washington Street Annexes has made Gilchrist's one of the largest of Boston's stores and by far the most accessible.

We now have two entrances on Washington Street, three on Winter Street and one on Music Hall Place leading to Winter Street, and another on Hamilton Place leading directly to Tremont Street, and there are 30,000 feet of added selling space. Aisles throughout the store are widened, stocks are greatly enlarged and sales force greatly augmented. Therefore, we are telling a million and a half people about Blue Ribbon Day, for we can accommodate wonderful crowds in the enlarged store.

HARVARD CONFIDENT OF DEFEATING ARMY IN GRIDIRON CLASH

HARVARD TRAINS HARD FOR ARMY

By E. V. B. Parke.

There is a good deal of speculation among the students at Cambridge, relative to the outcome of the West Point game on Saturday, and while the majority of the men declare that the crimson will return to Cambridge the victor, they all agree that the battle is going to be the toughest Harvard has had, or probably will have this season, and a real fight to the finish.

The close game with Brown and Princeton last week, together with the decided slump in the Crimson eleven by that defeat, will, it is hoped, act as a tonic to the development of the team for next Saturday's game, and while the coaches will have something to say, and doubtless will, about the showing made by the team against Brown, it is all generally conceded that the Crimson aggregation will be strong enough to defeat the Army.

In all probability there will be another performance tomorrow afternoon behind closed doors, when the varsity football squad will probably have their last chance for a workout before the battle tracks for New York State on Friday.

The prospects for a stronger team in general and especially in the backfield, Perkins and Percy Smith, the two centres, who have been out with injuries for some time, Wigglesworth, the regular quarterback, Bingham, and Leslie, the fullback, appeared on the field in their togs on Monday. While none of these did any scrimmaging, they all looked well and will be in hard work during the last two days of this week, with strong chances of playing in the game.

Lay Off Helped Frothingham.

Wigglesworth worked around catching punts in his old-time form, while Frothingham rested about on the thirty-yard line from where kicks from all directions came, and succeeding in booting some pretty ones between the crossbars just to show that his long layoff had not deprived him of any of his skill in this department of the game. Dorr, Irving and Perkins took the coolest work, from the fifty-yard line about to field the punts and quarterback Felton and Mixer sent many long spirals for long distances, and those men with Corbett and Porter acted as the shadows of the Crimson aggregating in the kicking game.

The game with Brown on Saturday showed the coaches that the team needed something in the line, for in that early part of the game they were outplayed and outfought by the Brown interference, for their runners in every instance were usually gained.

Corbett, the speedy quarterback, had back, so when the Crimson relies for any sensational gains it will be Felton and Mixer, and not enter the varsity line-up for a regular drill, but devoted his time to punting, he will start the field and receiving punts with his backs and quarters.

Graustein in the Lineup.

His place in the line up was taken by Graustein, the little chap who covered himself with glory in the Brown game, when he intercepted forward passes and ran the length of the field for a touchdown.

In the signal drill several new formations were tried out under the supervision of Coach Haughton and Assistant Coaches "Bob" Kernan and Paul Withington.

Kernan was captain and halfback of the 1902 eleven, as well as having played on the varsity team for four years. He had the duty, or rather the honor, Harvard winning 22 to 0, and has with him a number of the best backfields and punters that ever donned a Crimson jersey.

Withington, who came from his home in Honolulu to take the position of assistant to Dudley Fearing, Director of the Athletic Association, had charge of the linemen. His history as a player is consequently discussed and advertised recently that it hardly seems necessary to be revived it here, but let it be said that he had two years' experience on the Crimson eleven, first at guard and last year at tackle, the position he occupied in the line of linemen in first eleven.

COOMBS IN VAUDEVILLE.

COLLINS, O., Oct. 25.—The announcement is made here that Jack Coombs has signed a contract to pitch for the Philadelphia Athletics next season. Coombs has accepted an offer to join the Trompe here Thursday.

Boston English High and Rindge Manual Training School battle at the American League grounds this afternoon in a game long waited for by school football fans. Both teams are hard after the game, for it will put the winner in the running in the Interscholastic League.

Rindge went into the game a slight favorite on account of its recent victory over the strong Cambridge Latin School and the recent defeat of English High by St. John's Prep.

Rindge is in better shape than English, for they will have its best men in the line-up, while English will be minus Harold Janvrin, who was nearly the whole team when he played, and Gordon Roche, who is off the squad. Sawyer, Higgins and Nelson will also be unable to take part in the game for English.

BARNEY RACES JOHNSON TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Jack Johnson, heavyweight champion pugilist, and Barney Oldfield, a champion driver of racing cars, meet at Sheepshead Bay race track this afternoon in a series of three automobile races.

Oldfield is confident that, barring an accident, he will win in two straight heats. Johnson says he is equally confident of victory. The men have spent the last ten days on the course in practice.

"I have been besieged with queries as to why I am going to race Barney Oldfield," said Johnson to-day. "It is not my temperament to remain idle, and if I were making a million a week exhibiting myself in a theatre I would still be restless, anxious to engage in a battle of some sort, where the referee or judges give a decision and where there is a winner and a loser.

"I have scanned the betting and I fail to find even one fighter who is likely to give me a match. I am an automobile 'bug' all the way through and there is no reason why I cannot win from Barney Oldfield. If he licks me it will mean that a white man has conquered the black man who beat Jeffries, and I will make a hero out of Jack Johnson."

BIG AUTO RACE DATES FIXED

Robert Lee Morrell, chairman of the contest committee of the Automobile Club of America, has made definite announcement that the committee, at a meeting held recently, had decided not to change the dates of the international light car and the Grand Prize race contests at Savannah, and that these contests would be held on November 11 and 12.

Jesse Froelich, managing director of the Palm Auto Import Company of America, has announced that Victor Hemery, David Bruce Brown and Willy Haupt, would be the drivers for the 4-cylinder Benz cars that the company has entered for the Grand Prize Gold Cup. Hemery has already gone to Savannah with Franz Hein, his mechanic.

Wilmington, Del., home from his home in Honolulu to take the position of assistant to Dudley Fearing, Director of the Athletic Association, had charge of the linemen. His history as a player is consequently discussed and advertised recently that it hardly seems necessary to be revived it here, but let it be said that he had two years' experience on the Crimson eleven, first at guard and last year at tackle, the position he occupied in the line of linemen in first eleven.

COMBS IN VAUDEVILLE.

COLLINS, O., Oct. 25.—The announcement is made here that Jack Coombs has signed a contract to pitch for the Philadelphia Athletics next season. Coombs has accepted an offer to join the Trompe here Thursday.

NOVEL RACE FOR SADDLE HORSES

Maxwell Evarts of Windsor, Vt., son of the late famous statesman of New York, and the most enthusiastic patron of the Morgan horse in this country, has issued a challenge to the United States army to match a Morgan against any animal in the country's cavalry mounts, for a race from Montpelier, Vt. to New York.

The challenge of Mr. Evarts has aroused much interest among horsemen, especially those who delight in a good saddler, and who would welcome this supreme test between the two types of American horses.

The sentiment in Boston among a number of gentlemen riders is that in a contest between a Morgan horse and one of the cavalry type, such as the army has in the East, the former would win. But that if some of these grand chargers that the army has of ponies in the West at Forts Riley and Leavenworth were chosen for such a contest, the cavalry would win over the Morgan.

Mr. Evarts is a splendid gentleman sportsman and his challenge will be gladly taken up. Captain Pitcher, aide-de-camp, and Secretary of War Dickinson can be obtained, of which there seems little doubt.

CARROLL A CHOPPING BLOCK FOR HOUCK

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Tommy Houck made a chopping block out of Willie Carroll for three rounds at the old Madison A. C. and then the seconds of the latter mercifully threw a towel into the ring as a signal of surrender.

The bout was scheduled for ten rounds, but Houck had Carroll so battered that if a picture of Willie had been taken during the middle of the third session of milling and presented to his mother, she would have failed to recognize her darling boy.

BREAKS HIS HAND IN BOUT WITH NITCHIE

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Young Nitchie of Philadelphia, who fights in Boston tonight, won a ten-round bout here last night with Bobby Wilson of Utica. Wilson claimed he broke his left hand in the fourth round. Prior to that it had been about even. Wilson getting the best of the third and fourth, while Nitchie scored in the first and second rounds; the fifth was an even break and the sixth nearly so. The rest of the fight went to Nitchie with the decision of the crowd.

ROLLER WINS MAT BOUT WITH PERELLI

Dr. Ben Roller of Seattle, contender for the wrestling championship, now that Frank Gotch has retired, defeated John Perelli, the Italian heavyweight, in two straight falls, catch-as-catch-can, at the wrestling and athletic carnival at the Arena. Both falls were won by half-Nelsons, the first in 25 min. 30 sec. and the second in 14m. 30sc. Nearly 3,000 people, including many women, saw the events at the Arena. The show was a success.

CARR IS SLATED TO MANAGE THE BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 25.—It is regarded here as certain that Charles C. Carr, who resigned the the managership of the Indianapolis A. A. team a few weeks ago, will succeed Jack O'Connor as manager of the St. Louis Browns in 1911. Carr has accepted terms from President Hedges and will be given absolute control of the team.

CHANCE'S MEN GOING OUT BARNSTORMING

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Thomas Needham, third catcher for the Cubs, announces that he has organized the "barnstorming team." Manager Chance gave the players all permission to fill any dates that might be booked and Needham already has wired in quest of games.

COMES BACK, GETS DRAW.

READING, Pa., Oct. 25.—In the opening show of the Reading A. C., Tommy Langdon outfought Tommy O'Keefe through six rounds of their ten-round mixup. O'Keefe coming back in the last round and getting a draw.

FIVE BOUTS AT ARMORY TONIGHT

Tonight's card at the Armory Club looks like one of the best from a boxing standpoint ever seen in this city. Three six-round events and two ten-round engagements make a program that should make a hit with the menmegs.

The double whdup will show real class. Eddie Murphy, of South Boston, who showed such great form last week against Steve Latham, meets Young Nitchie of Philadelphia, and there will be something doing from start to finish while this pair are in the arena. Willie Beecher, who has looked the sensational knockout Brown five times to a draw makes his first New England appearance against Grover Hayes of Philadelphia. Beecher leaves after the style of Brown, always busy and eager to mix things up. A hurricane bout can be anticipated when these boys clash.

The show opens with a six-round bout between Benny Brown and Dutch Carr, and what they don't know about scientific boxing would fill a book, all through they can put it up in great shape. Young Reardon of Brockton, who goes against Joe Ugin, one of Eddie Mack's champions, will have a hard nut to crack. The final six-round go is a classic. Eddie Carr of South Boston facing Young Jasper, a protege of Al Delmont.

SALARY LIMIT $3,500.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 25.—At the annual meeting of the Southern Baseball League held here the salary limit for next year was fixed at $3,500 and the player limit at sixteen.

PRIZE DOGS FOR BIG SHOW HERE

The Boston Terrier Club's show that will be held at Horticultural Hall, November 17, 18 and 19, will bring together the greatest number of blue ribbon winners that has ever faced a judge.

Henry Riley, known throughout the country as one of the best judges of the Boston terrier will be called upon to face a serious problem from the start as dogs have been entered from all parts of the country and range from puppies to champions that have yet to meet with defeat.

The recent New York show brought about a number of setbacks for prize winners, and when the judging commences at the Boston show these same dogs will be found in competition with Judge Riley as the mentor of what is right in the Boston terrier standard.

The show always brings out society from New York, Philadelphia and this city. This year the club has received more specials than ever before, numbering over 400, and ranging from a gold medal to valuable silver cups.

A Hilton Model at $12.50

As was Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle," Edwin Booth in Shakespeare and Sir Henry Irving in modern drama, so is Frank Daniels in wholesome comedy.

No star in the firmament of American theatricals today shines more lustrously than does Frank Daniels.

Off the stage Mr. Daniels' rotund figure is always faultlessly clad.

If your figure is not so-called "regular" do not despair of ever finding a way of escaping the heavy tax imposed by the custom-tailor.

No matter what your proportion, we fit you perfectly in clothes that will be at once the admiration and envy of men of your build.

Our values are simply startling when you consider the quality, distinctiveness and beauty of Hilton Clothes.

BIG LEAGUERS MUST FIND YOUNG PLAYERS

By Alien Sangree.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The ridiculous ease with which the Athletics won from the Cubs has started a question which, no doubt, will be disputed all next Winter and, for that matter, until the next world series is played—namely, Is the American American League faster than the National?

Adherents of the latter will not admit this, of course, for they will point to the fact that he Giants beat the Yankees and that Cincinnati trimmed Cleveland.

Without a thorough test it would be unfair to state didactically that the junior organization is faster.

The only assertion one can make is that if the National does not follow the American's example and gather in new talent it will be no comparison in the matter of speed or pitching.

The Athletics had it on Chicago in every department because during three years Connie Mack has been securing the whole field of baseball, minor leagues, colleges and even the town lots, for smart young fellows who would develop into stars.

He was fortunate to have the nucleus of a good pitching staff, but he was not satisfied to rest with those, hustling up Coombs from College; Krause, from the Pacific coast, and most recently, purchasing Lefty Russell, who should be a star next season and a better one in 1912.

Mack Has the Call.

Mack has so many promising fellows tied up now that the Athletics are likely to win a couple of more pennants. In his last scouting trip throughout New England Arthur Irwin found that Mack had been ahead of him in securing at least a half a dozen future greats.

Crack ball players are so scarce that competition in grabbing them off is becoming desperate. Since Mack got the pace three years ago, every club in fast company has woefully awakened to the necessity of paying an annual salary to competent scouts who travel practically the whole year and over nearly the whole country.

The Boston Red Sox began to get rid of their veteran and reservable talent one season after Mack made the start, and the Yankees followed quickly in the wake of Boston.

This season Cleveland got wise, and I shall be very much surprised if the Naps do not show a fast young team next year. Some may be said of the White Sox.

The Chicago Cubs had almost the same club this season as they had when they won their first pennant in 1906, but the Athletics put forth an almost entire change of battle line than when they battled against the Cubs in 1910.

The play of Mack's men was faster, more accurate and more full of spirit than Chicago's. The Athletics did not win exclusively on pitching—not by a long sight.

From oldest to youngest of the American Leaguers there was sharper wit and more skill. No fielder on the Cubs gave such an exhibition of outfield defense as Danny Murphy, one of the few Philadelphia veterans. Murphy, however, got a bad start in the game when Mack converted him from an in to out fielder. He is a youngster in time of service in the garden with a veteran's brain.

Murphy's best bit of work was throwing Brown out at the plate, making a double play in the fifth inning of the second game when the score was three-to-four in favor of the Athletics. Only one man out and the bases full.

You would have bet most anything that Murphy pegged true as a bullet to Thomas, the ball fairly cutting the grass ninth, and Brown was nailed five feet away.

Collins a Star from College.

Collins, the kid of the team, was an illustration of what may be secured from colleges. He was a far tougher proposition for the old College pitchers than they expected. They found themselves outgeneraled by a smaller kid of vast nerve and a keen brain.

Baker and Barry were better than Steinfeldt and Tinker. Kling had little or nothing on Ivy Wingo, who was a great brace to his club.

It is a good wager that Frank Chance will make some changes in his team next year. If he does not the Cubs will not only be outclassed by Mack's men, but maybe two other American League organizations.

Boston, while she got the start on the Yankees in securing their leader, will not make as skilful use of it. John L. Taylor probably sees his mistake now in getting off Harry Lord, one of the crack third baseemen in the country. He is a member of the Red Sox indeed. Only for that error Boston would have given the Athletics a harder race.

Brooklyn Has Fast Youngsters.

There is one club in the National League that evidently does not intend to be caught like Chicago was this year, and that's Brooklyn. Such exceptionally clever infielders Dahlen hooked in that the Dodgers, handled right next season, will give any of their rivals a battle for first division honors.

Pittsburg seems to have been in a trance—another case of waiting a little too long to rejuvenate a club. She will have to wake up.

If McGraw can find the men at this late date he will strengthen, even if he has to pay fancy prices.

The Yankees are in better situation than any club except the Athletics. They finished second with an entire staff of inexperienced pitchers, a remarkable record. Those men will all be better next year, and the whole team should be twenty-five per cent. faster.

Blair is a fine catcher, heavy hitter and pretty fast on bases. A hard Spring training and Chase will have a young but seasoned club, the kind that Mack won with this year.

NEGOTIATE BIG BASEBALL DEAL

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—Manager Charles Dooin of the Philadelphia Nationals has negotiated a deal whereby the Phillies will get three of the best players of the Cincinnati team. The trade, which will be consummated in a few days, will send Hans Lobert, third baseman; Dode Paskert, the fleet infielder; Gaspar, the pitcher, to the Phillies, for Chief Beaumont, Outfielder Johnny Bates and a pitcher, who is probably Moren.

Manager Dooin attended the world's series and had repeated conferences with Clark Griffith, the leader of the Cincinnati team.

The deal should bolster the Phillies immensely. Lobert is one of the fastest players in the country. He ranks high in batting and base running, and is obtained for Dooin to shape up the team. Paskert is another live player who is one of the best base stealers in the country. Gaspar is a pitcher of much promise.

There is also a report that Titus and not Bates may figure in the deal. Paskert is accounted a most valuable player in the pinches where it is weak.

The big transaction should make a pennant contender out of Dooin's men, for the team is strengthened in the places where it is weak.

BUGLES SOUND FOR RUN OF THE HOUNDS

The hunt clubs are making the most of the perfect weather for some good timber behind the drag hounds, and large coverts of hunters are the rule.

The Myopia drag hounds meet upon Monday Common at 3:30 p. m. on that day, for a run and on Thursday there will be a morning run from the kennels at Hamilton. Next Saturday bugles will sound at Underhill's Corner at 12:30, with a breakfast to follow the run. Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Ayer will be the host, at his home on Myopia Ridge.

The Middlesex hounds meet at the kennels at South Lincoln this morning. On Thursday the call will be at Silver Hill Woods at 9:30 a. m. and on Saturday at Pratt's Mills, Sudbury, at 9 a. m.

COLORADO E. NOT TO RACE NEXT SEASON

George E. Esterbrook, the owner of the world's three-year-old trotting champion, Colorado E., 2:04¾, announces that the great son of The Bondsman will not be raced next year in the regular form. The champion will have a season in the stud, being bred to a select number of mares, and will again be trained by the veteran Gus Macey for a trip down the Grand Circuit. There is absolutely no foundation for the story that Colorado E. will go on the Old Glory horse sale at Madison Square Garden, New York, in December.

CLAY DROPPED FROM NAVY FOOTBALL TEAM

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 25.—A big change has taken place in the back field of the Navy eleven in the dropping of Clay from right halfback and moving Rodes from fullback to fill the vacancy. Austin, who played at full early in the season, has resumed his old position. In the line Loftin has resumed his place at right tackle and Dickinson has been given a chance at left end while Cobb rested.

CORNELL SMOKER ON EVE OF BATTLE HERE

The Cornell Club of New England is preparing to hold a big smoker Friday night, November 4, the eve of the Harvard-Cornell football contest. The Harvard coaches will attend, and possibly some of the players. Songs will be rehearsed and plans formulated for downing the Harvard supporters in the cheering line.

N. ADAMS AFTER BOWLERS HERE

By Ed. Cogswell.

It is sure up to Fred Williams to get busy. Bowlers throughout New England are looking for him to supply the real goods or go away back. Particularly is this the instance right here in Boston.

The reason! Well, Curtiss and Hill of the Casino alleys in North Adams, having noted the prominence of the aforesaid Williams in bowling circles in Greater Boston, have picked him out as the real proposition in challenging the best candlepin wreckers in this city for a match over the North Adams alleys.

Which means that in a personal letter to Williams the Messrs. Curtiss and Hill so far believe they have the better bowlers in their lung that if Williams will secure the best five in Boston to travel to North Adams for a championship match for the title of Massachusetts, all expenses will be paid by the Messrs. Curtiss and Hill. This just to prove that while North Adams is in the backwoods, yet the skill of the fallers timber hitters is superior to any that can be brought there from the fifth.

The Mt. Pleasant League has started under way with matches between McNamee and McCarty, and Fogarty and Fitzgerald.

KETCHEL'S ESTATE VALUED AT $18,000

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 25.—Julia Ketchel, mother of Stanley Ketchel, champion middleweight pugilist, who was recently killed in Missouri, has applied for application for appointment of James A. Lombard of this city as special administrator of her son's estate. According to the petition the estate is valued at $18,000, of which $8,000 is in real estate and $10,000 in personal property. Ketchel is said to have earned about $100,000 in the ring.

GEERS DECLINES TO MANAGE RACE TRACK

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 25.—Ed T. Geers, the veteran harness turfman, has declined an offer of the track at Selma, Ala. Business men in that city have been energetic in their efforts to induce the famous reinsman to come there again.

WOMEN MAY BATTLE FOR BILLIARD TITLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Miss Martha Clearwater of Pittsburg has sent a letter to New York challenging Mrs. Bertha King of New York for a billiard or pool contest for the women's world's championship, which Mrs. King claims.

WABASH BARS FOOTBALL

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 25.—Following the death of Ralph Wilson, right halfback on the Wabash, Ind., College football team it was announced that football will be discontinued at Wabash College.

BROCKTON MAN PRIZE HUNTER

By Dick Carpenter.

To Fred S. Feed of Brockton must be handed the ribbon in the bear hunters' class. He has just shipped out of the Maine woods the biggest black bear, not only of the season, but of some few seasons. The animal before shipment weighed approximately 450 pounds.

Mr. Feed went into the woods for almost any kind of game that would make a good trophy. Last week in one of his trips he came across bear tracks near a mud hole. Just for the fun of it he and the guide followed along in the bear's trail.

They had not gone far when in turning an elbow in a low hill they came full upon the big animal. The animal was frightened for the moment and turned in the wrong direction for flight. He found some big bowlders in his path. He then turned upon the men but Fred Feed was ready for him. Two shots did the trick. But Mr. Feed has not limited himself to bear hunting. He has picked up a lot of gossip about conditions in the woods and in the provinces. In writing of a friend of his he says: "I thought that game was plentiful up here in Maine, but from the reports we get from New Brunswick I am beginning to believe that one can keep up nearer to civilization up there and get away with just as good a record."

They tell me that at St. John's the word is "buy a gun and ski on your base doorstep and wait for a deer." And they get them, too. If I has been an awful season and the taxidermists have got all the work they want to do.

"As yet the hunters have only been going after the game. But with the opening of next month and the chance of snow soon the trappers are beginning to get busy."

RECORD SHIPMENT OF GAME BY TRAIN

BANGOR, Me., Oct. 25.—A record game shipment for a single train thus far this season was brought down from Aroostook, there being thirty deer and two moose, making the total fatly 300 deer and twenty-eight moose. The game was mostly owned by sportsmen hunters.

The moose were tagged to J. F. Fountain of Bridgewater, Mass., and to F. R. Jones of Pittsburg. Boston hunters with deer were A. H. Clark and G. A. Gargeon, other Massachusetts hunters included David G. Whelton of Salem, H. B. Sargent of Amesbury and R. H. Harrison of Dorchester.

ATTELL AND CONLEY TO MEET FOR TITLE

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 25.—Announcement was made to-day that Abe Attell, the title holder, and Frankie Conley of Kennedale, Pa., will meet in a twenty-round November 13, for the world's feather-weight championship.

IS THIS A GOOD CLOTHES ADVERTISEMENT?

If this is a good advertisement you will come over to our tailor shop and order a suit of clothes or an overcoat.

If it isn't a good advertisement you will go somewhere else. That is the test of all advertising—the response that it receives from the people for whom it is written.

We will make you a suit of clothes (or overcoat) for $15 to $25. There is nothing very startling about that. But listen to this:

The suit (or overcoat) will be made after the latest approved style—it will fit as it ought to fit—it will wear as well as good woolens can possibly wear—and the coat front will be designed after our famous pattern "The front that won't break down." The suit (or overcoat) fails in any one of these points you can come into our shop and get your money back—and no talking on our part.

There is some statement when it comes to making good clothes—and if we had not been in the tailoring business for 18 years and built up the smoothest working organization in Boston we would be unable to offer that absolute guarantee. Open days and evening—and don't be surprised to find us pretty busy when you call.

CATARRH

Sounds harmless. It's the most treacherous disease on earth. The poison in the blood reaches the delicate membranes lining of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs, causing them to be affected by hawking, spitting and coughing. The irritation extends to the lungs and the tissue wastes away. You can see the worst cases of catarrh and prevent consumption. Call or write.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

A Wife's Dilemma

By WINIFRED BLACK

DEAR WINIFRED BLACK—I am married but am scarcely more than a girl, and have two precious little girls to call me mother.

My trouble is this: My husband, whom I really love dearly, has learned to love the wine cup far too well. As a consequence, my little ones and myself have to do without many of the very necessities of life. He makes a good salary, but the saloonkeeper gets the lion's share of it.

I am an expert stenographer and am perfectly able to make a salary more than enough to provide my babies and myself with every comfort, and lay up for a rainy day. My parents are trying to persuade me to leave my husband and leave my babies in my mother's care and go back into an office.

I want to do my duty to my children and to my husband, and, of course, my parents think only of the money I could think of them. I know if I left my husband he would go completely to the dogs, but he apparently cares so little for me and my babies now that sometimes I feel that they have free will. Am I fair to them in thinking that I should let all the little making I could and prolong their needs and pleasures of childhood merely for the sake of seeing my vow, "for better or worse," kept, or should that vow be considered broken?

MRS. B. L.

What a poor, little, honest, lone conscientious, frightened woman, you! It seems to me that there is but one thing for you to think of in a case like this.

You think—what will be the best thing for them.

It seems to me that you have to choose in the matter as they are concerned.

The first that you have to deny them little material comforts does not abound in much, none of the happiest children I have ever known have worn darned stockings and patched frocks to school.

It doesn't make much difference in the long run whether children have chicken and ice cream or corned beef hash and cottage pudding to eat, so long as they have enough of whatever they do get.

But it does make a difference to them to be brought up in a happy, joyous atmosphere. Such an atmosphere is their right, and I don't believe you will be doing your duty if you stay with a man who makes it impossible for those children to know what a happy, peaceful home is and can be.

I wouldn't mind sending my little boy to school in a faded old coat and a pair of mended trousers, but I would mind having him come home to a cruel and drunken father and a heart-broken, unhappy mother.

Love and laughter—those twins should live in every home where there are little children.

I can go into any school in any city in the world and pick out by their looks the children of an unhappy home.

Do you think this man is worth so much to the world that you ought to stamp your children with that dreadful mark of crushed misery which marks the drunkard's children all over the world?

Why don't you get a good position—you say you can't? Take your children home to your mother, shut the door of your heart on the past and go to work to do your duty and give your children a happy, contented childhood.

A man who does not care enough for his wife and children to keep sober must take his place on the outside of things, where he belongs. Poor fellow, you can't help being sorry for him, but why should your children be sacrificed for his sake?

"For better or for worse." Yes, that is what you promised, but was it not for the very best thing in the world for him to leave him and bring him to a realization of the wreck he is making of four lives? I'm afraid I'd try it and see.

The Headwaitress

AND THE WATER-COOLER MYSTERY

By HANK.

"WHAT do you do with yourself on Sundays?" asked the Steady Customer of the Headwaitress as he looked up from the bill of fare in the cafe des Enfants.

"Work," she replied. "I'm always working. I haven't had a day off in so long that I hardly wouldn't seem natural now. But it's my own fault, I s'pose. I'll get a day off next week, sure, or I'm going up for a few days this Winter."

"Where do you hang out?" the commonplace Steady Customer inquired.

"I live in a boarding house," she explained. "It's a pleasant change, and I get a chance to slip some good food into myself, too. Them home cookings is delicious."

"I see" said the Steady Customer, looking again at the card, "that you have Vienna roast on the bill to-day. How about it?"

Real Lamb Chops

"It don't smell good to me," said the Headwaitress, "but they all seem to be eating it, so I suppose it's all right. You can't get an official report on it though. Take my advice and stick in on the lamb chops to-day. They're real lamb, no matter what you hear to the contrary. The other kind is real goods in a hurry. That's why the boss is getting rich."

"I'll take your advice," the commonplace Steady Customer promptly ordered lamb chops. "You know, I never bought the raw stuff myself, but I notice them in this boarding house at dinner. Well, the other day the mistress of the house left some friends on the porch chatting and she blows them to a home-made flicker. To cool off the stuff the landlady takes the ice out of somebody else's ice box on the porch, and which is placed there for everybody to judge when they want to. Well, nobody knows how it happened, but nearly the boarding house full of sticky glue got into the cooler, and pretty soon an old dame who smells suspiciously if she sees a red-nosed man across the street, comes up to get a drink of ice water.

She Was Thirsty

"Of course, far be it from me to cast aspersions at anybody, but I mean that there dame drink either a glass of water before she ever makes a whimper.

"Then, after she couldn't down any more, she straightens up and snowls like a tiger with the itch. The landlady, whose friends have gone, is just coming out of the door when the suspicious dame grabs her. 'Of course, I don't accuse anybody,' she says as sarcastic as she could, 'but there is certainly something very funny about the water in the cooler. It tastes like some one has put whiskey into it.'

"Well, the landlady gets wise to what has happened, but is cute enough to get some indignant herself. Chewing hard on a clove so that the old dame won't get on to the rickey she has had, she replies: 'Huh, I am surprised to hear that. I could possibly happen in my house. I am inclined to imagine that you are letting your imagination run away with you.'

"The row ends up with the old dame going around with her nose in the air very indignant like, for the rest of the day, and illuminating at kinds of things about everybody in the house.

"I suppose she says she never had a drop of anything in her life?" said the Steady Customer.

"Sure she does," replied the Headwaitress.

"Well, what gets me," said the Steady Customer, "is how the old dame recognized the taste of booze in the water if she never had any, as she says."

"I might say anything, and I might not," replied the Headwaitress, "but what I do know is that when the old dame got her third glass from the cooler I found out she had drained it dry."

"Maybe that's the reason she kicked," suggested the Steady Customer, and the Headwaitress smiled knowingly.

Married Life First Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

No. 27. Disciplining the Baby

"THERE'S no sense in that child crying like that!" Warren threw down his paper and strode into the nursery.

Helen was rocking the baby in a vain endeavor to quiet it. It was the nurse's afternoon off and the baby had been even more fretful than usual. For almost an hour now it had been crying incessantly.

"Lay it down and leave it there!" demanded Warren. "Give it to understand when it cries like that you'll not nurse it. Put it down and come out!"

"Oh, it would cry itself sick!"

"Well, what is it doing now?"

"Hush-a-by, Baby, baby! There,there, don't cry any more!"

Differences of Opinion

But the baby only screamed the louder.

"Don't stand so near, Warren. I think you make it more nervous. It's not used to any one standing over it like that."

"Well, it will have to get used to it. It's high time it was learning a few things—you're spoiling it to death. Lay it down as I say. Come out and leave it alone. It will soon stop crying then!"

"Oh no, no—it's too little! It's too young to try to train like that. Wait till it's older."

"If it's not too young to scream for an hour through sheer temper, it's not too young to learn to stop. Now lay it down and come out!"

"No, no, I can't. It would cry itself into a spasm!"

Hubby's Way

"Look here, Helen, you've humored that child long enough. You've tried your way ever since it was born and it cries incessantly. Now you are going to try mine. Do as I tell you. Lay it down and come out."

"Oh, don't, don't—Warren, please go away! Don't you see your being in here is just exciting it?"

But Warren had stepped forward, and in spite of her protesting cry had taken the baby from her and laid it in its crib. Then very firmly he led her from the nursery and closed the door.

Helen was excitedly trying to free her arm from his clasp to fly back into the nursery.

"Warren, Warren, you can't leave it alone like that! It's too little, it's too little! Oh, you are cruel, you are —"

"No, it is you who are cruel—nursing and rocking it every time it cries, spoiling it so and it will be harder and harder to break. Now, this time let me manage it."

Persistence

"But I can't. Oh, I can't let it cry like that, alone!"

"You must. Go into the front room where you can't hear it. Lie down on the couch in there. You look tired to death. I will stay here. If it cries too long I will come and tell you. Now, do as I say, Helen. It will be much better for the baby in the end."

He almost pushed her into the front room and closed the door. Then he began walking grimly up and down the sitting room, which adjoins the nursery. The baby was still screaming.

Five—ten minutes passed.

Helen came to the door. "Warren, I can't stand it. You must let me go to it." She was crying herself now. She tried to force her way past him to the nursery. But resolutely, almost roughly, he took her back into the front room.

A Diagnosis

"You must stay here, Helen, if I have to lock you in. I've begun this and I'm going to see it through."

"You're going to kill my baby!" excitedly.

"No, I'm doing it a great kindness, and you must not interfere."

Again he closed the door upon her. And there was something in his voice that made her fear to open it again.

Once more he walked up and down the room. Still the screams came from the nursery—angry, convulsive screams. That baby needed a spanking; nothing else would stop it, he told himself, grimly. That crying was temper, just temper! And the sooner it was conquered the better.

He threw open the nursery door and strode determinedly to the crib. He was fully resolved to stop it; his mind held no other thought. And then as he bent over it—he hesitated. He felt curiously baffled.

The Spanking

Where was he going to strike it. There didn't seem to be any place. Its little red, clenched hands were held up rigidly—they and its convulsed little face were all that were visible.

His determination to spank it was plainly weakening. How could he, when three second ago pieces. And yet the baby was still screaming. And that was temper, only temper, he repeated to himself to strengthen his purpose. Gathering his courage he lapped sharply at one end of the bits with his forefinger.

The baby stared at him in surprise. For the moment it was too astonished to cry. And then, with a gurgle, it caught at the finger with both tiny hands. They were hot and wet and they held on to his finger with a weak little clutch from which, somehow, he couldn't draw away. He sat down on a chair by the crib.

The Solution

The baby still held to his finger. It had stopped crying and was gurgling softly. Its face was all wet with tears. With his other hand he got out his handkerchief and awkwardly wiped them off. That soft little clutch on his finger—somehow it thrilled him as nothing ever had before.

A half-hour later the nursery door opened noiselessly and Helen stood on the threshold. But, as the door was behind him, he did not see her. What she saw was a sleeping baby with its little hands holding tight to Warren's finger—while he sat down there patiently by the crib fearing to move lest he waken it.

For a moment she watched them. And then, very gently she closed the door and stole softly away.

THE DIFFERENCE

I KNOW a human dynamo,
Who does some careful dressing.
At ten bell to his office go
When golfing isn't pressing.
He sits up in his office seat
While other folks are broiling,
And there emits a constant bleat
About the joy of toiling.

I know a lot of smaller fry,
A lot of lesser fellows,
Some make the dirt in ditches fly,
Some run a forge or bellows,
Some drive a wagon or a dray,
Some earn their bread by clerking,
But none of these have much to say
About the joy of working.

His First Barber Shop Hair Cut — By Kennett Harris

A. L. SAUNDERS, the genial and enterprising tonsorial artist of the Hub Barber Shop, having the last throne of children from the south, walnut-framed looking glass, breathing exhaustively on the glass while he polishing energetically with the bottle, your hair cut, I s'pose—where's your father?"

"I thought your mother cut your hair."

the open door and regarding the proceedings with evident interest.

The boy was not only small, but undersized and freckled as to that feature, through the freckles were the less noticeable for his brown skin. His hair was flat white and straggled behind in uneven locks well below the neckband of his little collarless shirt. He was barelegged and barefooted moreover.

"Hello, Bert," said the barber, pleasantly.

"Hello, Al," returned the boy.

The barber went on with his polishing and the boy continued to watch him in silence. Presently

"Ain't there no school to-day?

"Yuh."

"Then why ain't you there?"

"Want a hair-cut."

Small-boy Devilment

The barber laid down his chamois and looked at the boy in amazement and with some suspicion, but the pebble-gray blue eyes met his own twinkling black ones seriously and unblushingly.

"Here?"

The boy nodded.

"Yuh."

"I thought your mother cut your hair?"

"She ain't going to any more. She says I'm about big enough now to go to a barber shop. She told me the last time that if I behaved myself, she'd quit doing it. It takes up a heap of her time anyway."

"Been behaving yourself?"

"Sure I have."

"Who was it that tied the hitch rope of Doc. Ackerman's horse to the cook stove outside the hardware store and then started him up?"

The small boy looked embarrassed for a moment or two. Then he said, "I didn't think the old plug could pull it. Jimmy Woodard bet me in it."

"That ain't the only devilment you've been doing," said the barber, with a sage shake of the head. "Well, if you want your hair cut, I s'pose—where's your father?"

Mom said for me to tell you she hadn't got the change in the house and she'd have father stop and settle when he was passing."

"All right, then," said the barber. "Hop into this here chair and we'll fix you up."

The boy climbed into the plush chair and settled back in luxurious ease while the barber deftly tucked a clean cloth around his neck and settled his head in the right position with a firm but gentle touch.

"See!" exclaimed the boy. "this is she ain't a-goin' to cut it no more. Say, dandy!"

"Like it, do you?" said the barber, good naturedly.

"You betcher. What's in them glass bottles?"

"Do good," replied the barber, snapping his scissors briskly in the air. "How you want this hair of your cut?"

"Short."

The boy grinned at his own reflection in the glass while the barber's comb straightened out the tangle of his tow mop. "It don't burn a bit," he remarked. "Why should it?" asked the barber.

Not as Mothr Did It

"When mom combs it, it hurts. Mighty nigh pulls the hair out by the roots. Some of them bugs fatherly."

"You sure," said the barber. "That was the blue forget-me-not wreath, ain't you read?"

"Did you print them gold letters on yourself?"

"No, I sent off and had that did. It's inked right into the mug."

"I've got a mug at home my sister gave me. It's got 'For a Good Boy' on it, but I'd rather had just my name. Can I have my hair brushed with one o' them machine brushes, Al?"

"I guess not," replied the barber. "Sam ain't here to turn the wheel, else you could."

The small boy looked disappointed, but he brightened up after a few minutes. "You ain't dug the points o' them scissors into me once yet," he said, happily.

"That ain't what I use scissors for," said the barber. "I just use 'em to cut hair, not to fish folks."

Then the Clippers

"Mom always jabs me and sometimes she nicks a piece clean out, and then, when I holler, she says: 'Land sakes! I never did see scotch a squirming young one. Why cuh't you keep still?' and then she rags me over the head. Never mind, she ain't a-goin' to cut it no more. Say, you'll clip me with them clippers of yourn?"

"Does your mother want it clipped close?"

"Sure. How long will it take to grow out?"

He Wanted All the Fixings

"No, she won't. I ast her. I ast her if I couldn't have some of that stuff in the red and blue bottles and she said 'yes.' I told her that it would be extry, but she said 'never so.' I was so good I could have what I liked and she'd tell father to pay for it."

"Mighty nigh all Summer," said the barber. "You won't need to come to me again for a couple of months. Unless you want a clean shave."

The boy giggled at this and the clipping drew rapidly to a close.

"There!" said the barber, picking up the soft brush and whisking away the short hairs.

"I want some of that Do-good on, Al," said the boy.

"That's extry."

"I don't care."

"But your mother might."

"You're the doctor, Bert," said the barber, and tilted the red bottle into his hand. The boy beamed scrapheartily while the soft, fat finger tips massaged his scalp.

"Say, this is dandy!" he repeated, and after a minute or two, "how much is this a-going to cost?"

"The whole thing's a-goin' to cost thirty-five cents," said the barber.

"I'm s-goin' to fetch dis for this," observed the boy decidedly.

"For what, Bert?" asked the barber.

"For this," answered the boy in the same confident manner. "I was a-lyin' to you when I told you Mom sent me here. She was a-goin' to cut it herself this noon when I came home from school. You needn't think I came here for nothing, Al. Father'll pay you. It's me that's goin' to get Sam Hill."

"Great Scott, Bert!" exclaimed the barber, shocked. "You hadn't ought to have done a thing like this!"

"I know it," said the boy, coolly. "There ain't a particle of hair down my neck. When Mom cuts my hair, I don't quit itching for a week."

"I'm not old man'll just about skin you," said the barber.

"I know it," said the boy. "Did your mother ever cut your hair when you was a boy?"

"But lying!" persisted the barber, gravely, as he removed the cloth. "Bert, don't you know the Good Book says that liars shall have their portion in hell fire?"

"I know it, Al," said the boy, hitching up his suspenders that had slipped. "I know it; but honest, Al, it's worth it."

Too Bad — By James J. Montague

(James A. Patten, who engineered the wheat corner, complains that people are living too high.)

TOO bad that Patten's feeling sore because, when men must cut;
They have to pay so much for bread—they can't invest in wheat.
Too bad that Winter overcoats and flannels are so high;
There's little left to speculate in corn, or oats, or rye.
For while the populace insists on having food and clothes,
The stricken broker has to sit and nurse unnumbered woes.

Each can of beans you purchase at the corner grocery store,
Each pound of beef at thirty cents, each pair of shoes you buy,
Each nickel that you barter for a slab of apple pie,
Deprives some speculator of his heaven-given right
To overhaul your savings and take everything in sight.

For self-denial always is a good thing for the soul.
Perhaps you'll starve, but what of that, 'twould be a noble deed,
If thereby you but helped a gang of brokers to succeed.

So try to be a good game sport and let them have it!

Desperate Desmond

A Continued Picture Drama of Love and Hate, with a Thrill in Its Every Picture

I DEFY YOU DESMOND. YOU WILL NEVER MARRY ROSAMOND!
WHEN THEY COME FORK WATER YOU WILL RUN
FAREWELL ROSAMOND. BUT AS TO YOU DESMOND I HATE YOU.
I'M NEAR THE END OF THE ROPE CLAUDE ECLAIRE AND YOU WILL HIT WATER IN A SECOND.
SAVED! LUCKY A BARREL HAPPENED TO BE IN THIS WELL. IT WILL KEEP MY HAIR FROM GETTING WET
IT WAS DESMONDS WORK. MY ROSAMOND, BUT IT ONLY HELPED CLEAN OUT THE WELL
MY HERD IS SAVED AND NOW A DROP OF WATER ON HIS CURLY LOCKS!
WHAT A BEAUTIFUL SHAPE OF RED. ROSAMONDS IN. AS A SMALL HOME WRECK
THE LOOSENED THE FEROCIOUS BEAST, MA'AM.
AND RED IS SUCH AN ATTRACTIVE COLOR, TOO

Of all the dark and dastardly deeds that Desmond ever did this is the most diabolical. Our brave hero has no chance at all, unless, of course, some unforseen contingency should thwart the villain's deep laid plot.

Slowly but surely Claude Eclaire goes down to his death. Desmond has plenty of time, and he wants to prolong the agony. Isn't it the limit the way that unscrupled scoundrel thinks up stunts to hurt Claude's feelings!

It's mighty lucky for Claude that barrel was in the well. But then Claude always was a lucky guy. If he hadn't been Desmond would have got him long ago. It must be awfully discouraging for a villain to have his plans slip up that way.

It's almost worth while to fall into a well if you can be saved by some beautiful dame like Rosamond. Still we wouldn't advise you to try it. You can't always depend on being rescued by such fair hands. That's where the melodrama has it on real life.

Even though Claude is a hero and has his picture in the paper every day, he is not too proud to do menial labor. He'd much rather beat a carpet than let Rosamond do it. After they are married it may be different.

You are doubtless aware of the fact that bulls do not like red. Well, this is a red carpet. You'll have to take our word for that, because we are not allowed to use red ink on this page. The next picture will show what the bull did to Claude.

Confidences Betrayed

A SHORT STORY BY RUDYARD KIPLING

THAT was its real name, and its nature was like unto it; but what else could I do? You must judge for me.

They brought a card—the housemaid with the fan-teeth held it gingerly between black finger and blacker thumb—and it carried the name Mr. R. H. Hoffer in old Gothic letters. A hasty rush through the file of bills showed me that I owed nothing to say Mr. Hoffer, and, assuming my sweetest smile, I bade Fan of the teeth show him up. Enter stumblingly an entirely ramsey-colored young person about twenty years of age, with a suspicious bulge in the bosom of his coat. He had grown no hair on his face; his eyes were of a delicate water-green, and his hat was a brown billycock, which he fingered nervously. As the room was blue with tobacco smoke (and Latakia at that) he coughed even more nervously, and became seeking for me. I bit behind the writing table and took notes. What I most noted was the bulge in his bosom. When a man begins to bulge as to that portion of his anatomy, hit him in the eye, for reasons which will be apparent later on.

He saw me and advanced timidly. I invited him reflectively to be the only other chair, and "What's the trouble?" said I.

"I wanted to see you," said he.

"I am you," said I.

"I—I—I thought you would be quite otherwise," said he.

"I am, on the contrary, completely this way," said I. "Sit still, take your time and tell me all about it."

He wriggled tremulously for three minutes, and coughed another. I surveyed him and waited developments. The bulge under the bosom crackled. Then I frowned. At the end of three minutes he began.

"I wanted to see what you were like," said he.

I inclined my head stiffly, as though all London habitually climbed the stairs on some errand or other to see me.

He then delivered himself of a speech which he had evidently got by heart. He finished painfully in the delivery.

"I am flattered," said I, at the conclusion. "It's beastly gratifying. What do you want?"

"Advice, if you will be so good," said the young man.

"Then you had better go somewhere else," said I.

The young man turned pink. "But I thought, after I had read your works—all your works, on my word—I had hoped you would understand me, and I really have brought your advice—all ready—in my pocket," said I. "You understand perfectly," said I. "You are oppressed with vague and nameless longings, are you not?"

"I am, terribly," said he.

"You do not wish to be as other men are?" You desire to emerge from the cocoon and soar high, to make your mark, to do—er—what?"

"Yes," said he in an awe-stricken whisper. "That is my desire."

"Then," said I, "you have, excessively, in several places at once, cooks, housemaids, governesses, schoolgirls and—"

"But one only," said he, and the pink deepened to crimson.

"Consequently," said I, "you have written—so much—You have written verses."

"It was to teach me to write prose, only to teach me to write prose," he murmured. "You do it yourself, because I have bought your books—all your books."

He spoke as if he had purchased dungarees or bloc.

"We will waive that question," said I, tactfully. "Produce the verses."

"They—they aren't exactly verses," said the young man, plunging his hand into his bosom.

"I beg your pardon, I meant will you be good enough to read your five-act tragedy?"

"How—how in the world did you know?" said the young man, more impressed than ever.

He unearthed his tragedy, the title of which I have given, and began to read. I felt as though I were walking in a dream; having been till then ignorant of the fact that earth held young men who held fiveact tragedies in their insides. The young man gave me the whole of the performance, from the preliminary scene, where nothing more than an eruption of Vesuvius occurs to mar the serenity of the manager, till the very end, where the Roman gerity of Pompeii is slowly engulfed up with lakes in the presence of the audience, and dies murmuring through his helmet vizor: "S. P. Q. R. R. I. P. R. S. V. P." or words to that effect.

For three hours and one-half he read to me. And then I made a mistake.

"Well," said I, "who's your Mr. and Pa?"

"I haven't got any," said he, and his lower lip quivered.

"Where do you live?" I said.

"At the back of Tarporley Mews," said he.

"How?" said I.

"On eleven shillings a week," said he.

"I was pretty well educated, and if you don't may too long they will let you read the books in the Holywell street stalls."

"I got them second-hand, four and sixpence," said he, "and some I borrowed."

Then I collapsed. I didn't weep, but I took the tragedy and put it in the fire, and—and I permitted no present to you my guests! Mr. Maurice Vance—Prince Paul Kolzoff."

The name in Jardine seemed to trip about his tongue as though it were the most familiar one in the world.

"I thought you were alone," he said, in no under voice.

"But no." There was delightful surprise in Lilane Deschanel's voice. "Mr. Mr. Vance!—her tongue faltered a little over the name, but recovered itself gaily, "motored with us from Paris. I have been fortunate enough—please congratulate me—to persuade him at last to come and begin the bust of mine for which I have been so long importuning him."

Monsieur, then, is a sculptor? Mademoiselle, I felicitate you upon the accomplishment of your desire, although I had not heard of Mr. Vance in an English sculptor whose name it is my reproachful misfortune to be unfamiliar with. Is he not so?"

He bowed, addressing himself to Jardine, but despite the suavity of his tone, there was a certain hint of the dramatic in it, a subtle antagonism, the antagonism of sex and race.

"The Englishman—an American, before Jardine could speak Lilane had answered for him—"of great eminence in his own country, where I had the privilege of meeting him during my long two years ago."

And what should he do? Could he deny her into the mesh of a scandal? He had heard her name coupled with that of his more than once. It was freely said that Kolzoff pursued her merry world.

Knowing the reputation of he dreaded to discredit her before him, yet he could have carved her gibberess with which she had lied!

said the Prince again, and Jardine that though he smiled at him pleasantly there was something covertly insolent in his manner. "And you are at work already, monsieur. Truly you are a worthy son of the most indefatigable nation in the world! May one be permitted to look at the beginnings of your labors?"

"No—not for worlds—no! Not even you, mon Prince."

Laughing and agile as a girl, Lilane Deschanel had darted forward and flung her silk motor veil over the clay head on which Jardine had been engaged.

"Oh, you don't know how wonderful he is!" Lilane Deschanel laughed. "But I forbid you to spoil him in your dreadful flattering way. Come away, Prince, come out of the studio into some more civilized portion of the house."

She swept the two men before her out of the great room, locked the door behind them and gave the key to Jardine with some laughing words that brought a scowl to the Russian's face.

As they entered the house and were crossing the cool, flagged entrance hall, Lilane slipped from the Prince's side, and, under the pretence of looking for letters on the carved chest by the door, murmured a few words to Jardine.

"Be prudent," she counseled him impudently. "And let me lead—I shall do my best for you."

Before he could protest she was gone; he saw her once again at the Prince's side, laughing up at the man whose face had fallen suddenly into the lines of illhumor, smoothing away the evil humor with a stroking hand. Then she turned and was gone.

Jardine had now no doubt as to the identity of the owner of that well-bred, tired, patient, semi-philosophical voice. This was "madame," the widow of "Monsieur," the Canon, whose equivocal position had amazed him! No woman born out of the shadow of an English Cathedral town could have thrown just exactly that tender and regretful note into two words.

Then, all at once, he was aware that the lady, having greeted the Prince, was coming toward him with a smile on her thin and faded, but pleasant, face.

"I am glad to make your acquaintance at last, sir," she said, holding out a wrinkled hand, adorned with many old-fashioned rings. "I have heard so much of you, but have not had the pleasure of seeing you—I was myself indisposed when you first descended upon us in so unexpected a fashion.

She laughed gently, scrutinizing Jardine keenly with her pale blue eyes.

Jardine hardly knew what he murmured as he took her hand. He was conscious, however, that Lilane Deschanel had flushed warmly.

"Then you did not travel with Mlle. Deschanel?" asked the Prince, bluntly, turning to Mrs. Courtfield.

"Oh, yes, we had quite an adventurous journey," Mrs. Courtfield replied vivaciously. "I wish, Prince, that you could use your influence—for you are one of the few people in the world who have any influence with Mlle. Deschanel—to persuade her that these long, unattended trips are hardly safe."

Malignant Hostility

"Unattended, madmoiselle?" Kolzoff turned unreasonously to Lilane. "I understand you to say that Mr. Vance motored with you?"

There was a smile on the man's face. The question was painfully put, but his eyes glowed and darkened like the heart of a fierce flame.

"Prince," she replied with a laugh. "What if I did? It appears that monsieur did not accompany us. What then? I forgot. You ought to know that my memory is atrocious."

She looked at him steadily for an instant with half lowered lids. It was a look that leaped on two continents.

But though the Russian was no longer angry with the woman who had long captivated him and held in capricious subjection, he doubted her. Jardine realized that the latent hostility of Kolzoff toward himself and grown in those few minutes into something active and malignant.

"I am growing positively nervous," Lilane Deschanel whispered to him suddenly, as Mrs. Courtfield carried the prince off to the other end of the room.

"The widow of Monsignor the Canon was indiscreet." Jardine said with a little smile. "My dear lady, do you imagine that your transparent diplomacy will carry you the cracking ice for twenty-four hours longer? Your friend already suspects."

"Poof!" she gave a disdainful little laugh. "Paul is a bear who would eat up every man who looks at me," she said, "and even—the sentence was uncompleted, for the subject Rasolen returned at that moment with Mrs. Courtfield.

"When are you going to begin your bust, Mr. Vance?" he asked. "I am all eagerness to be permitted to see the already commenced cast. I admire some of your English work immensely," he said. "There was an Englishman—that poor fellow who came to so untimely an end the other day—whose work I much admired. I paces some of it in my house in Paris. Jardine—Richard Jardine—did you ever meet him by any chance?"

His eyes were fixed on Jardine's face with an almost insolent stare.

Just for a moment the earth seemed to fall away from Jardine and then he steadied himself.

"Richard Jardine," he repeated. "Yes, I know both the man and his work well—some of it was quite fair. What did you say had happened to him?"

"He is supposed to be dead—hadn't you heard?" replied the Russian. "It is a very old and complicated story—no doubt Mrs. Courtfield will give you the details more accurately than I; But I do know that Jardine is supposed to have met his death in France lately—in an airship accident."

"Supposed—is there any doubt about it, then?" Jardine asked.

"I don't know." The Russian shrugged his shoulders. "His companion's body was recovered, I understand—but not Jardine's. Some people think that he is not dead—I think that he is dead—there is no doubt, there is here?" Jardine said. "Indeed, sir, I hope you may prove right. Poor, old Jardine—I liked him—I liked him well."

He might have been speaking of a stranger. He was speaking of a stranger's death, and there was not the slightest sense of concealment. A man dead and buried—the old Richard Jardine would never rise from that grave, to know that.

A Diversion.

At he spoke he was conscious that the eyes of Lilane Deschanel were fixed on him. He glanced at her to meet her look of unmistakable admiration—a glance of comradarie that had in it nothing of the look of pitying friendship she had given him while she disgraced by his side in Paris. At this moment Mrs. Courtfield created a momentary diversion.

"O, please, please!" She held up her wrinkled, small hands. "Indeed, don't let us talk any more of that dreadful gloomy subject. Lilane, you look tired and just a little flushed. Let me take charge of your guests, if they will permit me, while you retire to your room."

For a moment Lilane hesitated, but with a pleased compliment to Mr. the prince laid a hand upon her arm.

"No, I insist upon you going, mademoiselle. You must not think of me at all. But think of yourself a little, for you look, as you always look, very charming—but tired. Mr. Vance and I shall stroll in the garden, that is, if you are agreeable, monsieur," he added, turning to Jardine.

"I should be charmed," Jardine replied. The two went out together.

"You know Mademoiselle in America, Mr. Vance," the prince questioned as they walked. "America worships her as it always worships genius. I suppose it was in Washington that you met?"

Jardine, fighting wildly, suspecting a trap, replied falsely that it was not in Washington, and added a few words of praise of the woman's art. But, before the Russian had time to put further questions, Jardine asked him suddenly what piece of Richard Jardine's work he possessed.

He exhibited once or twice at the Salon, I know," he said. "I saw some of his work there. I suppose you bought in Paris?"

"No, hardly enough in London. I made my purchases through a dealer." He named one or two things which Jardine remembered having sold through his own hands.

"It's an odd thing that I was actually to negotiate for an unfinished thing of his before he died," he said. "One of the best things he had ever done, so I was told—The Laughing Satyr."

It was the merest fancy, but it seemed to Jardine that some spark in the prince's eyes sought his as he spoke. It was with a relief for which he despised himself, that Jardine heard Lilane Deschanel's laugh behind him, and turning, saw her coming toward him fresh as a rose in her white gossamer gown.

"I hope you haven't been as bored as you look, you two," she said.

"Not at all," Jardine said, but it seemed to him never far from bored," the Russian told her; "I have been talking to Mr. Jardine a thousand pardons, mon-dieur I see one's mind runs on a name we were talking of that unfortunate Englishman's work, mademoiselle, of which we find ourselves so great admirers. But you, mademoiselle, you have been disobedient; you have not rested.

If she had been pale a moment since, she was rosy now, but to Rosnia did not appear to notice her change of color and the talk turned to indifferent subjects as they walked up to the steps of the rose garden and sat on the moss-grown paths of the charming, neglected orchard.

The traces of McAndrew's attempted landing were still visible in the shattered roofs of the red-tiled sheds that bordered on the orchard.

The Prince drew attention to them with a wave of his hand.

"That piece of sleeping beauty appears to be more ruinous every time I see it, mademoiselle. Each time that I approach this chateau I expect to find only a heap of stone and a mourning village where the citizens of the flooding Water and its chatelaine had been. Monsieur, to such a spot as this your unfortunate competitor might well have met with his lamentable accident."

The words were innocent, but with a question, and Jardine, horribly taken back, found himself unable to make any answer for the moment. It was comforting to find he had turned white and sick-looking. It seemed to him an eternity before he heard Lilane Deschanel's petulant exclamation.

"Paul, you are an utterly detestable man. Can you talk of nothing but morbid things? Monsieur Jardine, I shall not dance and death and lamenting people who has ever heard of on this pleasant glorious afternoon?"

"A thousand pardons, mademoiselle," the voice had lost the intimate note when he spoke to her. "I shall not offend again, I promise you. But are we not indulging Mr. Vance? He has been ill I understand, and he very hot out here in the sun."

"Yes, I am sure he is horribly tired," Lilane said, with compunction in her voice. "You've got back to the studio now, and I know you long to be!" she added, mischievously.

And as Jardine turned back in obedience to his obvious dismissal, she walked a few steps with him.

The prince stood looking after them with a furious smile on his dark face.

"She is a very transparent schemer, poor little one," he said to himself. "But I wonder, I greatly wonder, for what reason she harbors this man who is sought for by the English police."

The Laughing Satyr

The Story of a Studio Murder Mystery, from "The Veil of Clay," by Meta Simmins

(Copyright in America by London Daily Mail, 1916)

23D INSTALMENT.

"PAUL!"

It seemed to Richard Jardine that he had never before witnessed a finer exhibition of the actress's art than with which Lilane Deschanel favored him as she rose hastily and went forward with outstretched, welcoming hands to meet the man who thus unceremoniously had entered the studio. Gone was the agonized, despairing woman of a moment before, and in her place was a creature of smiles, youthful, palpitating—welcoming an intimate friend with a charmingly balanced enthusiasm.

"How nice it is to see you—and how characteristic of you to arrive four hours before I was myself due at Crosbie!" she cried, "I assure you it is by the merest chance that you find a hostess to welcome you, mon Prince. We started four hours sooner than I intended merely to gratify a caprice of Mrs. Courtfield's.

The man made no reply. He had taken the hands she put out to him in his own and now he held them out from him for an instant, smiling into her face with the confidence of a man absolutely certain of his welcome.

It took Jardine a moment to identify the man, though his appearance was fortunately familiar. Then he remembered. This was Prince Paul Kolzoff, the immensely rich Russian whose motoring exploits had made his name familiar throughout the world.

The Prince Introduced

Lilane Deschanel disengaged herself gently and turned towards Jardine with a faintly apologetic gesture as though only at that moment did she remember his presence.

"Prince"—her tone was perfectly normal—"may I permitted to present to you my guest? Mr. Maurice Vance—Prince Paul Kolzoff."

The name in Jardine seemed to trip about his tongue as though it were the most familiar one in the world.

"I thought you were alone," he said, in no under voice.

Dolly Age and Marry Age

By JAMES RAVENSCROFT

WHEN she was at the dolly age—
Of fairy story wishes,
When play was work and work was play
And life was make-believes;
How loved she was the "keeping house,"
And all her dear young heart
Was thrown into the sewing rake—
The wife-and-mother part.

She made the clothes her dollies wore,
She rocked them to the store,
She washed and swept, and, what was more,
Her mud pies were the best.
Oh, she was such a faithful slave!
Without the least reserve she gave
Her all to it, nor sought to save
Herself one day rest.

Her mother often smiled and said,
As she would pat her darling's head:
"She'll be a treasure when she's wed;
She has the real home zest."

When she was at the marry age—
Of precious lover-strife;
Then work was work and nothing more,
A thing to spoil one's life.
She's married, but it seems she can't Care for domestic ways;
No longer does she love her best
Loved name of childhood days.

She makes, 'tis true, some of the clothes
Her babies wear, and some of those
She wears herself, for then it goes
To much greater cost.
To household duties she doesn't take;
Especially does she to bake—
And when she does, she's sure to make
Her family suffer most.

Around darkest spots of bad
She seems to pin her faith and trust;
She says a wife's life is so sad
Will some one please explain?

TO GAIN WEIGHT

Will you tell me what to do to get plump and increase my weight a few pounds? I am 32 years of age, five feet four inches tall, and weigh only 110. I should be very glad if you will tell me how to gain about 15 pounds.
MARION K.

Directions for increasing the weight have been printed here so often in the past that I present this people that some may from at a repetition.

You may increase your weight by eating nourishing food, using plenty of cream, olive oil, fruits and nuts. Above all, take plenty of exercise in the open air, and sleep nine hours out of the twenty-four. Many patients are known to get fat live on an exclusive milk diet, drinking from eight to fifteen quarts a day.

I have had a number of people tell me that a new nourishment called Sargol does wonders in putting on flesh, and that as a test the Sargol Co., 1562 T Herald Building, Binghamton, N. Y., will send a 50c. package free to any one mailing them 10c. to help pay distribution expenses. You had better send to them for this, as it would be much easier to take a little tablet after a meal than drink bolder large or small quantities of fat producing liquids. It sounds reasonable, as we all know there are foods so concentrated that an ounce or so a day is sufficient for a soldier on a long march.

I hope you will be able to write me in a short time that my advice has helped you gain the desired weight, for there is nothing more embarrassing than to be skinny and underweight.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

There is a constant acceptance of profits and the fact cannot but strengthen the buying power.

$ $ $

The shaking out of a too numerous following and the building up of a fresh short interest seems to be the aim of the latest manipulation, and it is being successfully attained.

$ $ $

Reciting sales have been heavier, according to the specialists, in the stocks which have led the list for some weeks past. Reading and United States Steel, though in all the active issues profit-taking has been on a liberal scale.

$ $ $

There promises to be more firmness in money rates, but this will not affect stock prices. The increase in interest on the part of the public in the stock market itself will account for this, or some of it at any rate. It takes more to scare up a bull market.

$ $ $

Competent critics are agreed that the new week opened with the Imperial Bank of Germany has strengthened itself materially, the Bank of England has added to its stock of gold, cotton is down sharply and corn has sold at the lowest price in years.

$ $ $

Stocks have been distributed freely since Friday morning, but only for the purpose of putting the market in more salable shape. A violent bull campaign like the one now in progress must necessarily be a costly one. The big people are bonded with positions of much interest, and stocks bought at much lower prices than they are doing what they always do, trying to advance the market and thereby make sure that they are succeeding in this.

Now financing required by the Erie throughout the calendar year will reach about $30,000,000. If conditions are such as to make it possible to raise this amount at a reasonable interest rate a considerably smaller amount will suffice. It will be absolutely necessary, however, to do the road in order that some $15,000,000 may be met in maturing obligations. The balance of the $30,000,000 needed is the road, if obtainable on favorable terms, will be used to great advantage in double tracking and other improvements which its president is desirous of making.

Great Northern had a leeway of $440 per mile or surplus over dividend needs last year, in spite of the unfavorable change in its income account. It kept its operating ratio down to almost the exact figure of a year ago, although there was a $10,000,000 addition to revenues. If $2,000,000 allowed expenses to advance as they have on most of the roads in the past few years with the wage increases and other items, the margin over dividends might easily have been wiped out.

$ $ $

A story is in circulation to the effect that a big plunger is short of Union Pacific and that he is being pressed for stock by corresponding parties in the trade. Whether this is true or not, the shorts and bears are buying with more confidence as to the future.

$ $ $

Smelters and the copper shares are today in short supply and demand. It will be remembered that the American Smelting company has advanced the price of 600 to the Smelters Securities Corporation. Bonds have been prepared and the issue will soon be announced, furnishing means to reimburse the treasury of the United Smelting and Refining company. The recent trade wide agreement to restrict the output of copper has destroyed all competition in smelting. This, taking in connection with the contracts obtained by the Guggenheims for reducing the Kennecott, Chino and Ray Consolidated, leads insiders to believe that a lively campaign will soon be on in Smelters and in the copper stocks.

ROCK ISLAND LEADS DECLINE

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Losses were quoted in almost every standard railroad and industrial stock at the opening of the market today. A lower range of prices went over from London and general hesitancy on the part of buyers caused the decline.

Rock Island preferred was the leader in the decline during the early trading in the dropping 3¼ points under the close of yesterday. The Standard railroad shares were weak and off, St. Paul declining 2, and Union Pacific half a point. A slight rally in these stocks during the latter part of the first hour wiped out part of their decline.

Steel common was off about ½, and the preferred 1¼. Delaware & Hudson dropped one point to 169, but later made up part of this loss.

Southern Pacific, Reading, Erie and Great Northern preferred also quoted fractional losses during the early trading.

The coppers, with the exception of American Smelting, were weak. This stock opening at a decline of ⅝, quickly rallied and after the first twenty minutes of trading was quoting a fractional gain.

In London a loss of from ¼ to ⅝ was noted in almost every prominent stock. Trading on the curb was quiet, with the material changes in prices. The silver stocks were strong.

SMOKE TALK AT BOSTON COLLEGE

In the music room of Boston college next Monday the seniors and freshmen will give a smoke talk to the undergraduates. Arrangements are being made to have some of Boston's most noted speakers address the gathering. The committee in charge comprises Leo P. Noonan '11, chairman; Daniel F. Burke '11; Patrick J. Dawson '11 and William Desmond '11.

PLAN SECOND MOTOR TRUCK RUN NEXT FALL

By J. C. KERRIGAN.

The Second Annual Commercial Motor Vehicle Contest of the BOSTON AMERICAN will be held next Fall, the exact date not having been determined upon. But that a second contest is desired, is proven by the attitude of the contestants and others interested in the one just closed, and that it will be held has been determined by the BOSTON AMERICAN, which will again do everything in its power to make the run a success from every standpoint. Everywhere one hears words of praise for the excellence of the AMERICAN run, and the good effect will be felt for many long to come.

At least three dealers, who were on the trip last week, tell stories of having made sales as a direct result of the splendid showing made by the cars on the trip.

Everyone, of course, is waiting to earn the coming report which is being prepared by the expert accountants, upon which it is hoped to be announced tomorrow. The official report will be made the basis for awarding the first money in the several classes. The only thing that is certain is that there will be one winner in each class, but who that winner will be is a matter of conjecture.

The enthusiasm evoked by the contest in all stages was great, and everyone expects the end of interest to be the end of cars as a whole, but in the individual ones engaged.

In 1-run on the return from Newburyport, was seen one of the greatest crowds of the entire route. The streets were packed and people who were anxious to get a look at the cars, talk with the different drivers.

Thatcher, who drove the Wane-Bender car in the tour, returned to Philadelphia, going over the Lincoln highway. Before starting, he visited the AMERICAN office and said: "I want to take this opportunity to thank the AMERICAN for the opportunity I have had of demonstrating the reliability and value of motor vehicles in a commercial way. We came here from Philadelphia with the determination to do our best, and have done our best, and are very much pleased at the treatment accorded us. The officials of the run were courteous under every condition. The way the roads were laid out was a revelation to me, and the details and arrangements were all complete. We had nothing to do but drive our car, and, indeed, I found that everything we were entitled to would be received."

The hotel arrangements at Newburyport, were excellent, in all being provided for beforehand, so that we did not have to wait a long time after our arrival to be assigned to our rooms. I cannot, in any particular, hear the contest or arrangements could have been improved upon. We were in a position to enter into every witnessed, and when next we have some I might mention. The auto car that I drove in this run is the same one that I drove in the 1909 run, and I performed creditably in the Philadelphia run.

The car in the contest was, comparatively speaking, a new car, having been out of the International Harvester Company's factory but a few days before the run throughout, made every control on time. It was without a most consistent performer.

ONLY 5 DAYS MORE OF MECHANICS FAIR

The Mechanics Exposition can only remain open five days longer. It will positively close next Saturday night after four weeks of success. It is already known that all records for Mechanics Hall have been broken by the crowds in attendance during the past three weeks. Five special days and nights arranged for this, the final week give a certainty of a continuance of the phenomenal patronage. This is New England Week, Monday, Nov. 1; Navy Day, that at least 10,000 members of the navy and their families will be present. Tomorrow evening will be the second "society" night. The first one was a huge success, and this bids fair to repeat it because of the special program. Mrs. Caroline B. Nichols and her orchestra will make its first appearance this season. Friday will be school day for parents and teachers and pupils from the cities and towns, and on saturday, the closing day, the Cambridge and Somerville school children will attend.

TALK INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION NOV. 17

The fourth national convention of the Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education will be held in this city next month and the local committee of the organization and the Boston Chamber of Commerce will jointly give the distinguished visitors who attend it, a dinner at the Hotel Somerset on the evening of Thursday, November 17. The speakers will be former Governor Guild, President Edgar Delano of the Wabash railroad, Dr. Charles P. Neill, United States Commissioner of Labor, Chairman F. P. Fish of the State Board of Education, Dr. F. H. Hedley, president of the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education, Superintendent George Kerschensteiner, Superintendent of Schools at Munich. A delegate from the American Federation of Labor will also speak.

"SPECKLED BAND" THRILLS

Presented by a Splendid Cast, Including a Real Live Poisonous Snake.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Who said melodrama was dead? It was a foul slander. The throbbing drama had everything its own way at the Boston Theatre last evening—there was nothing else in sight, as you discovered in Charles Frohman's little nerve bouncing palpitation that moved into town yesterday.

The opening of Mr. Frohman's producing season in Boston was done in full view of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Speckled Band," which caught the big audience where its best emotions were stored. It was another case of Sherlock Holmes to the rescue, and there was nothing quiet about the operation. It was no place for a man with a weak heart.

Few if any detective stories have equalled in thrilling intensity of the Sherlock Holmes' solution of "The Speckled Band" Sir Arthur dipped his pen deep into the red ink. It was exhilarating, then to follow the weird, cruel career of Dr. Grimsby Roylott, as the murderous game upon his own stepdaughters with a well trained serpent of the deadly poisonous variety.

Sherlock Holmes is Welcome.

The cunning of Roylott and his weird deadly make him a sinister figure in the case. The finale man in the audience would have trusted no other detector of crime than Sherlock Holmes. It was no boy's work to face Roylott, as he was played by Edwin Stevens, once more the wiliness of a philanthropist who will not be a party to the reputation of his beard.

Mr. Stevens' study of Roylott left the doubting character in the play. By exceedingly intelligent touches of realism he has merged his own marked personalities by the wonderful beard, for him to play the playwright. He held himself close to the text of the story.

"The Speckled Band" brought one positive treat in Miss Irene Fenwick, a young Boston girl, going on the stage for the first time, and making a long accepted welcome. Miss Fenwick has the best manners of a Boston ingenue, and won rewards—both in the young woman herself and the character. She accepted her instantly, for there was no way of escaping, such compelling ways.

Miss Charlotte Willard had a Holmes that met every requirement. The popular officials of the run were courteous under every condition. The way the roads were laid out was a revelation to me, and the details and arrangements were all complete. We had nothing to do but drive our car, and, indeed, I found that everything we were entitled to would be received.

The hotel arrangements at Newburyport, were excellent, in all being provided for beforehand, so that we did not have to wait a long time after our arrival to be assigned to our rooms. I cannot, in any particular, hear the contest or arrangements could have been improved upon. We were in a position to enter into every witnessed, and when next we have some I might mention. The auto car that I drove in this run is the same one that I drove in the 1909 run, and I performed creditably in the Philadelphia run.

The car in the contest was, comparatively speaking, a new car, having been out of the International Harvester Company's factory but a few days before the run throughout, made every control on time. It was without a most consistent performer.

SNAKE IN CARE WITH

The Doctor Falls Down.

The Dr. Watson of Ivo Dawson inspired no courage among the audience. He was not the man to take an active part in criminal investigation. He played the role of a man going to his own wedding. Sabine Brook was as hard as steel in a role that demanded low temperature, and John Findlay, who is never found wanting, was the favorite from the start in the role of Dr. Grimsby Roylott, Roders.

If ever like melodrama in large doses "The Speckled Band" is now our fashion. The audience last evening met it in the right way and gave it a stirring welcome. The introduction of a real snake to the stage was a bit of daring, and the snake that sprinkled a few chills through the house. It was a well-trained snake, too, for he played his part with a due sense of propriety.

"The Speckled Band" is a strong play, admirably acted, and offers new proof that Sherlock Holmes is on the market again.

Park Theatre.

"Seven Days," which opened at the Park Theatre last evening, coming here directly after its sensational run of 402 performances at the Savoy Theatre in New York, will be received in Boston with a deal of interest. The tremendous success of this highly amusing farce has been won on both sides of the Atlantic, and there is no doubt but it will set a new record of prosperity at the Park Theatre.

Keith's.

Nothing so illariously funny as the sprightly musical comedy, "The Photo Shop," has come down the vaudeville pike in many a day. It's on to tabloid form, of superior quality, as was testified by the two audiences to see the initial production of the musical bit in Boston at Keith's Theatre. Buoyed by a company of handsome girls and men and talented principals, "The Photo Shop" lookied huge in point of expense to the audience.

Charles J. Sabo was excellent as the theatrical manager in the piece, while Miss Mamie Fleming soared as the girl behind the camera. Eugene Redding and Annie Morton were up to the notch.

Assisting Miss Fleming were Florence Noyes and Walter Norris Silles for their stepping alone in the world of vaudeville. Yesterday's debut resulted in success to spare, the dance of Mrs. Leighton, a dashing widow. The music of the piece is very pretty and the settings are pleasing. The play is by E. M. Barbour and the music by Carl Wilmer. The cast includes Margaret Darrow, Frances Woodbury, Gertrude Reese Nichols, Dacora Dean Bruton, Yvonne Portin and Frederick Hastings.

Grand Opera House.

The return to Boston of "The Wolf," which began a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House last evening, gave local playgoers another opportunity of seeing one of the strongest melo-dramas ever written by Eugene Walter. A splendid company interpreted the roles and the picture interpreted the roles and the picture of life in the great and bleak Northwest has been shown on the local stage. Special attention should be paid to Miss E. Bernadeo and Miss Mildred Hyland.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The last week of "The Lily" was begun at the Hollis Street Theatre last evening. The delicate touch of David Belasco is seen in this intensely dramatic offering.

Colonial Theatre.

The alluring melodies and refined comedy of "The Arcadians" make its success at the Colonial emphatic. A new week was begun last evening before an audience that was intensely interested in the performance.

Globe Theatre.

"The Family" began a new week at the Globe Theatre yesterday, with John Westley and Maisel Bert carrying the honors by their excellent acting. The play is a pretty picture of rural life.

Columbia Theatre.

"The Merry Whirl" dropped into the Columbia Theatre yesterday, where it was met by enthusiastic and friendly audiences. The show moved rapidly and with its score of pretty girls, you may be sure that there were no dull moments.

Gaiety Theatre.

It was a jolly entertainment that opened the week at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday. "The Golden Crook Extravaganza" company arrived with a score of lively girls and a bunch of live comedians. The show moved swiftly at all times.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The new bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday was headed by Ali Pasha, who told everybody's fortune. Other features and moving pictures completed the program.

Howard Athenaeum.

One of the most spirited burlesque companies on the road is "The Follies of the Day," which came to the Old Howard yesterday and opened a week's fumasking. Of course, it was impossible to overload the pretty girls in the company, there were twenty of them, and every one a favorite. Interpolated between the numbers the programme was enlivened by several high-class vaudeville specialties.

Shubert Theatre.

The final week of "The Dawn of a To-morrow" began at the Shubert Theatre last evening. Miss Gertrude Elliott, in the role of Hilad, has made one of the artistic triumphs of the season.

Tremont Theatre.

"The Fortune Hunter" continues its remarkable prosperity at the Tremont Theatre, where John Barrymore and an excellent cast are charming hosts in the splendid entertainment.

Castle Square Theatre.

The success of "The Talk of New York" at the Castle Square last week induced Mr. Craig to continue the offering for another week, which began last night. A friendly audience enjoyed an excellent performance.

Majestic Theatre.

"The Chocolate Soldier," which played to capacity audiences at the Majestic Theatre last week, began a new week under the same conditions last evening.

Hub Theatre.

The Aviator Girl made a favorite of herself at the Hub Theatre yesterday. She was a big one all the way through. Other vaudeville features and motion pictures completed the bill.

Scenic Temple.

The new entertainers at the Scenic Temple yesterday provided an unusually attractive program. There were both vaudeville features and motion pictures in the bill.

Waldron's Casino.

The mention of Billy Watson's name in connection with "The Girls From Happy Land" at Waldron's Casino Theatre, carries a guarantee of genuine fun-making. Watson was there yesterday and every body in the audience was moved to hilarity.

AMERICAN WANT "ADS" BRING QUICK RESULTS

SOCIETY BUDS PREPARING FOR BUSY SEASON

BY ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

This year's Sewing Circle which is composed of the smartest buds of the year is gradually getting into full swing and the first meeting has already been held with the result that the important matter of selecting the officers for the year has been performed and the whole debutante world seems happy and satisfied with the result. Among the honorary members chosen are Miss Frances Irene Moss of Plainfield, N. J.; Miss Margery Balch, whose home is in the West; and Miss Jean P. Kay. The next meeting of the Circle will be held at the home of Miss Elizabeth Gray of Chestnut Hill sometime in November. Miss Gray is president of the Sewing Circle League. Instead of doing much serious business, however, the debutantes, so full of their happy anticipations of the coming season and the joys it will bring in Back Bay circles, will discuss the various events and festivities already planned.

* * *

Among the earliest debutante affairs, is the way, are the two teas which Mrs. Fiske Warren of Mt. Vernon street will give for her daughter, Miss Rachel Warren and Miss Margaret Pearmain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Pearmain of Beacon street. As Miss Warren and Miss Pearmain are cousins many of their events will be shared in common as will the tea which Mr. and Mrs. Warren are to give at the Somerset December 5th.

* * *

Plans for the Winter are still the topics of conversation while the older set, too, and all one hears these days is: "Where are you returning to town this fall?" "Where are you to live?" "When do you sail?"

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Coolidge, who made an unusually long season at their cottage on Cushing's Island, Maine, have taken an attractive apartment at the Bellevue in Brookline, where they are now and their young children are to pass the Winter.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. Edward B. Kellogg, have closed their Summer home at Cohasset and have opened their town house on Beacon street. Mrs. Kellogg spent the greater part of the Summer traveling in Europe.

* * *

Miss Martha Codman, who has recently returned from abroad, is at the Newport, where she plans to remain some weeks longer before coming to town for the Winter.

* * *

The Misses Iasigi, who went abroad last Spring, have returned to their town house on Marlboro street.

* * *

Among those recently coming back to town Matters-point are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Williams, Jr., of Walnut Place, Brookline; Miss Mary Lee of Beacon street, Brookline; Mrs. John de Koven and Mrs. Jesse Well and Blake, who is now at home in Brookline.

* * *

The Reginald Fosters, who spent the Summer at Magnolia, have since been the guests of relatives in Canada. The Fosters will return to their town houses, No. 48 Pewsey, the last of October, but will stay prior to sailing for Europe. They will remain abroad until Spring.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Yen Eyck Wendell and their son, Yen Eyck Wendell, Jr., have closed their country estate, Lakeview, at Uxbridge, Mass., and returned to their home in Washington. Mrs. Wendell was before her marriage, May Foote of this city.

* * *

The John Turner Attorneys have concluded their stay at Bark Harbor, Maine, the fattened resort of so many Boston fashionables and are at Mount Kisco, on the New York, where they plan to remain until the middle of November, when they will return to New York to arrange for the wedding of Miss Katherine Attorney and John Theerman of this city.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Codman since closing their Summer home on Smith's Point, Manchester, last week, have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Morris at Brookhurst, their home in Boston.

* * *

Miss Elizabeth H. Clarke and her nieces have closed their season at Jamestown, R. I., and are now at their home in Cambridge. Mr. and Mrs. John A. Burnham and their daughter, Miss Helen Burnham, have since closing their estate at West Manchester been at their home in Boston and are about to return and open their town house on Commonwealth avenue.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond H. Oxnard (Catherine Sabine), have returned to their home on Edge Hill Road, Brookline, from Manchester, where they spent the Summer.

* * *

Mrs. Henry S. Grews has closed "The Gemsacks," he Summer home at Manchester.

Why You Should Live in the Country

And Why Children, Above All, Should Live Far from the City and Its Deadening Dirt, Noise and Disease

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

Human beings, for whom was made this beautiful earth, with its trees and sunshine and clouds, are huddling in narrow, stony, sunless streets.

The worst American example of human crowding is in New York. But Boston, Chicago and the other great cities of the world are almost as badly off.

Men gather together like swarming gnats. They look only upon the faces of other men—worried, anxious, hurried, tired, bound to brick and stone and iron.

The sun rises and sets and, unless by accident, the city people see neither the rising nor the setting. They have forgotten that there is a moon and do not distinguish its light from the dull blue electric lamps swinging shadows above the street.

The human race in the cities reproduce faithfully the old Greek story of the men that lived in the cave and who knew of life only as much as was told by the shadows that the fire cast upon the walls.

At whatever cost, by whatever sacrifice, take your children, take yourself into the country. Even if you must go to a dismal, lonely, half-built suburb—go there. Get away from the noise, the stones, the microbes, the dulness.

The mind within you has back of it a history of millions of years—a history in touch with Nature and Nature's wonders.

Your mind cannot grow, develop or work as it should in the city.

The earth, to which you belong, is the inspiration which you need, and a mind separated from that earth by the stones of the pavement is as unfortunate as a child separated from its mother.

When last you saw the country, how did it look to you?

The sun filling with brilliant light or mysterious shadow every corner of the land.

And above, most beautiful of all, the clouds, fleecy and white, circling around the horizon, and the wonderful, clear blue space, infinite and eternal, above your head.

The country is the home of man. The city is a monstrosity, a sore on the earth's surface, a proof that the dollar still controls civilization, a sign that man is weak, that distance controls him, a demonstration of his lack of imagination, lack of determined longing for liberty.

Future generations will read of the city life as we read to-day of the lives of the cave men, the lives of those that built their homes on platforms out above the lakes, or of those that dwelt high up on the sides of cliffs.

There are millions of square miles unoccupied on this earth's surface—mountains, valleys, rolling hills, beautiful plains—and the millions of human souls that should occupy and enjoy this great domain are cooped up in hideous cities and tenements, stagnating spiritually and intellectually.

If you admire the man who freed his slaves when others kept them bound, emancipate yourself, FREE YOURSELF AND LEAVE THE CITY.

Advantages of the University Extension Courses

It is surprising how little is known about the University Extension Courses in Boston. It is more than strange that the splendid opportunities afforded by these courses are not more generally availed of.

This comparatively new departure along educational lines makes it possible for a man or woman to get a thorough college education with a degree and at the same time attend to their regular vocations.

Not only that, but the Extension Courses are arranged to suit the convenience of the students.

To young men and women who want a college education, and who can spare some time in the evening or in the late afternoon or Saturday, they offer a remarkable chance.

Another important point is that the cost is very low, the tuition fee varying from $5 to $20 a course.

Full information about the courses may be obtained by writing to the Commission on Extension Courses, No. 19 University Hall, Cambridge.

Let us just take a look at the advantages. Here are the evening courses, for instance: English literature and composition, at Harvard University, Tuesday and Thursday; experimental and applied electricity, at the Institute of Technology, Tuesday and Thursday; principles of economics, at Tufts College, Monday and Wednesday; psychology, at Harvard University, Monday and Wednesday.

The afternoon and Saturday courses include language and literature, natural science and history, English composition, at Boston University; history of English literature, German and French, at Boston University; French literature, at Wellesley; physics, psysiology and mineralogy, at Boston University; botany, at Harvard, and geography of Europe, at Harvard.

The Monday afternoon history classes meet at Simmons College. Ancient art and civilization lectures are delivered at the Museum of Fine Arts, and the art classes are directed at the Institute of Technology.

Persons who wish that they had had a college education will be able to get one that is actually an effective substitute for it, and which is in some respects more effective than the ordinary college education, because of the greater application and maturity of the students, by taking advantage of these University Extension Courses.

Great Expectations

By THOMAS TAPPER

SOME time ago a will was made public, the conditions of which excited no little interest.

This will was made by a colonel named Dreyenforth, and in return for the estate he bequeathed, the testator required certain conduct, points of view, beliefs, trend of education and several other things that may, or may not, coincide with the pursuit of liberty and happiness as they stood eventually most desirable to the inheritor, now a boy of the tender age of eight.

The will in those of tender years is often written after the home and desire of the older generation, who have encountered snags in the stream of life, but in a way quite its own.

Here is a case in point:

THE Professor was a piano teacher.

There were three things in this world that he loved before all others, his wife, his son and his music. There was one thing, not yet in this world, that he desired before all others; namely, that his son should become a great musician.

But the Professor was wise, in that he did not force music upon the boy in his early childhood. Good music was constantly made in the house and the boy heard it. The Professor had no doubt that, at the right moment, the boy's imagination would be quickened by it and he would begin to seek expression in music. So the piano was always open, always inviting, always waiting to become the means for voicing the Professor's desire.

Once upon a time, the professor had been deeply moved by the story of the composer Mozart's childhood; of his effort at the age of three or so to elicit pleasing sounds from the piano. And he fully understood and longed for the delight that father Mozart felt when his little son went to the piano and drew sweet sound from it—all by himself.

But the days and weeks and months went by, and the Professor's boy—healthy and busy in countless ways, still never evinced any interest in a piano.

IT rained hard one morning, and the Professor was putting on his rubbers in the front hall. The door to the music room was partly open. As the Professor was about to depart on his round of daily lessons, someone began to play the piano, making a little tune of two notes sounding together in the right hand, and the same two an octave lower in the left. It had not much rhyme nor reason, but the two-tone chords sounded with unfailing accuracy in both hands. And the Professor at once thought of little Mozart. His face flushed with joy and anticipation. His boy had voluntarily gone to the piano and was making seven sounding chords. He tiptoed back to the partly open door, his rubbers dangling, and crept out of his steps, and looked in.

It was a rainy morning, and the boy, forbidden to play out of doors, had made an early visit to the attic in search of forgotten playthings.

As the professor looked in upon what he imagined was to be the scene he had so ardently hoped for, he saw his son standing in front of the keyboard, playing the sweet sounding chords. The unfailing accuracy of his means and method was simplicity itself. Among his playthings the boy had found a toy rake with all the teeth gone to save two at either end. He stood in front of the piano and pressed the rake on the keys, the two pairs of teeth giving not a bad imitation of the youthful Mozart.

Now the professor had a decided sense of humor, a gift never wanting in a true philosopher. He tiptoed softly back to the front door and went out smiling.

The Reform Machine

By CHARLES FERGUSON

THIS is the machine age.

It is the age that has outdistanced every other in its general understanding of the fact that men can get whatever they want if they will use their intellect to organize the right means.

Machinery is mind harnessed in the service of desire.

It magnifies the energy of ideas.

But in the field of politics it is not understood—by the most public spirited understood only by the "bosses."

It is understood as well as powerful.

There is no yet in America no powerful political machinery devoted to the reform-ideas, but distracted, driving forces of reform.

The existing political machine is detestable—but not because it is mechanical—but not because it is planned to make use of the stupid into tolerance of a privileged class.

The forces of science and civilization cannot flow through it. It wasn't built for that purpose.

Thus the principal engineering task of our time is the creation of a political machine that can be worked in the interest of the general welfare—a machine that will make use of the great tidal passion for progress.

Its output will be a steady rise in the general standard of living.

This enterprise is purely a question of intelligence. And when the thing is done it will be no more miraculous than the Manhattan or the East river bridges, though it will be infinitely more valuable than such works, since it will open the way to unimagined exploits in every department of engineering.

The reform machine will amount to nothing less than a working organization of the free intellectual forces of the country.

This is what the public school system undertakes to be—with some success so far as children are concerned.

The movement for the organization of political independence is precisely as idealistic as a consolidated.

A continental chain of independent newspapers, enterprising all "party organ" competitors in circulation and influence, is, of course, the same kind of a chimera. Only it happens also to exist.

Intellect, always and everywhere, is public spirited. It has to be. For no man with half a mind to fail to understand that lying and stealing are bad business. The trouble with American politics hitherto has been that public spirited men have hated machinery.

Thus the men of ideas have had no social organization to work through. And the men with the organization have had no ideas—above their vest buttons.

The existing party machines, taken all together, have never organized more than 10 per cent. of the electorate. The rest of the voters have not been organized—they have been herded.

The Reforms Machine will easily govern the country after it has effected a solid, structural organization of about 5 per cent. of the adult males.
